Probers Eye Huge Gifts In Florida's '48 Primary

Senators Seeking Data on Advances Of $300,000 for Governor Warren

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

A major point of inquiry in the Senate Crime Investigating Committee's trip to Miami this week will be the big political contribution made to Gov. Fuller Warren's 1948 primary campaign.

Committee sources indicated yesterday the Senators are interested in these cases:

1. A contribution of $154,000 by William H. Johnston of Jacksonville, president of four Florida dog tracks as well as of the club that runs Chicago's Sportsman's Park.

2. A combination contribution and loan of another $154,000 by Louis E. Wolfson, the 38-year-old Jacksonville businessman who recently bought control of Washington's Capital Transit Co. Wolfson told The Washington Post he does not have and never had any connection with Johnston, with dog or horse tracks or any gambling ventures.

May Subpena Wolfson

A subpena already has been issued for Johnston, just returned from Europe. The committee is considering a subpena for Wolfson who told The Washington Post he would be glad to testify if asked.

The fact that the two Jacksonville men turned in the identical big contributions to the Warren campaign chest came to light last February when one of Warren's campaign managers broke with him over the Governor's handling of the gambling issue in Florida. He was C. V. Griffin, fired by Warren from what the Governor called an honorary post of "investi-

The Senate Crime Investigating Committee quickly switched hotels for this week's Miami visit after a bit of investigating showed the one first chosen belonged to a racketeer. The Senators plan open hearings in the Florida city on Thursday and Friday.

Authority to President

Senators Draft Job-Cut Plan With Emergency 'Stop' Clause

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

Another plan to reduce Federal personnel in nondefense agencies is being drafted by the Senate economy bloc.

The general idea is to give the President the authority to suspend any cut voted by Congress if and when he deems it to be in the interest of national defense.

If present plans are carried out, such a provision would be offered to the amendment by Senator Bridges (R., N. H.) that would reduce employment in many nondefense agencies by upwards of 50,000.

The Bridges amendment, a substitute to the House-approved Taber-Thomas rider, was rejected late Saturday by the Senate Appropriations Committee by a 12-to-9 vote. Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) argued that the amendment was impractical and that it would interfere with defense-related Government activities.

During the closed committee debate, it was learned, it was suggested by several Democrats who voted against the proposal that it be amended to give either the President or the Budget Bureau the authority to suspend it when it did hamper defense operations. Bridges will take the fight for his rider to the Senate floor. Debate on the 34.6-billion-dollar 1951 appropriation bill will begin either today or Tuesday.

The Bridges substitute would exempt the Defense agencies, National Security Council, National Security Resources Board, the White House, legislative and judicial branches, most operations of all Federal hospitals, and the investigative activities of the FBI, Internal Revenue, Customs, Immigration and Naturalization, Bureau of Prisons, and other such agencies.

Post Office would be given a 2-percent personnel cut; all other agencies a 10-percent slash. Budgets for travel, equipment, supplies, etc., also would be trimmed.

Incidentally, the Bridges substitute is a liberal amendment in comparison with the House-approved Taber-Thomas and Jensen riders. The House riders would knock out more than 300,000 Federal jobs in the next year. The

2d Division Is Alerted for Far East Duty

Infantry to Move 'In Near Future'; Meade Army Units Also Given Signal

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

The veteran Second Infantry Division was alerted yesterday for movement to the embattled Far East where other American troops are resisting Communist invasion of South Korea.

The Army Department, which announced the movement "in the near future" would not say whether the Second was destined for Korea or to replace units sent there from Japan.

In addition to this division, the Army said two antiaircraft artillery units and several "supporting units" in the Sixth Army area also had been alerted. The Second Infantry Division, with headquarters at Fort Lewis, Wash., is in the Sixth Army.

Other Outfits Alerted

An unrevealed number of unidentified combat outfits in Second, Third and Fourth Army areas also were alerted. Headquarters of the Second Army are at Fort George Meade, Md., of the Third Army at Fort McPherson, Atlanta, Ga., and the Fourth Army at Fort Sam Houston, San Antonio, Tex.

Second Army spokesmen would not say yesterday what units or what types within its area had been alerted. The area includes Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Kentucky and Delaware, and among its units are the Eleventh Airborne Division and the famous Third Armored Cavalry Regiment at Fort Meade. Its troops also include numbers of artillery antiaircraft, engineer and service organizations.

Actual strength of the Second Infantry Division could not be learned, although it is known to be at less than its authorized strength of about 18,000. Its troops have been rather widely scattered along the West Coast and in Alaska on training missions, which have included considerable mountain and ski operations. The division's three infantry regiments are the Ninth, Twenty-third and Thirty-eighth, all with long and honorable combat records.

General Keiser Commanding

The division is commanded by Maj. Gen. Laurence Bolton Keiser, who assumed command last April, succeeding Maj. Gen. Harry J. Collins, who was transferred to command of the New York-New Jersey Military District with headquarters at Fort Totten, N. Y.

A veteran of some of the fiercest fighting in both world wars, the Second Division was organized overseas in 1917 with the Ninth and Twenty-third Infantry Regiments and the Fifth and Sixth Marines. It stopped the German drive of June, 1918, at Chateau Thierry, captured the supposedly unassailable Blanc Mont ridge and fought at Soissons, St. Mihiel and in the Argonne.

In World War II, triangularized and without its Marines, the Second landed at St. Laurent in Normandy on June 9, 1944, the day

AWAITING EVACUATION—U. S. soldiers, wounded by North Korean tank and infantry gunfire, lie on stretchers somewhere in South Korea, waiting for removal to a hospital

Americans Dig In To Stem New Red Advance 12 Miles South of Chonan

BULLETIN

Tokyo, Monday, July 10 (AP). General MacArthur reported today 36 North Korean tanks destroyed or disabled in yesterday's round-the-clock air operations—the first of the Korean war.

A communique issued at 2:30 p. m. (11:30 p. m., E. S. T., Sunday) also reported 135 Red trucks and two locomotives either destroyed or disabled as 136 fighters and 17 light bombers hammered the advancing Reds day and night.

The communique reported "a distinct lull" in the fighting on the main front around Chonan, and added:

"The North Koreans have been having communications troubles since the heavy air strikes of yesterday."

The main effort of the Reds is still on the highway running south from Chonan, MacArthur said.

He added that four North Korean divisions are operating in the Chonan sector and two others in the central corridor to the east which goes south from Wongju to Chungju.

Still farther east, in coastal area around Samchok, four Red tanks and five trucks were set afire by attacking planes, the communique said.

The air force was credited also with knocking out bridges at Osan, Wongju and Samchok and the last remaining span acros the Han river near Seoul.

Tokyo, (Monday) July 10 (AP).—The U. S. "lost" battalion of the Korean war has cut its way back to American lines, General MacArthur announced today as the Communist drive was halted with the help of rouhd-the-clock air attacks for the first time.

A general headquarters communique announced the battalion rejoined its regiment in "good condition" after being reported trapped and encircled by the North Korean First Division. This Red outfit had an "overwhelming" 10-to-1 advantage in manpower and armament, it said.

"In this bold operation the battalion fought a most successful holding, delaying and rearguard action," MacArthur said. The battalion was not identified and there was no mention of its size or probable casualties.

The battalion was isolated in an all-night battle July 8-9 near Chonan, 50 miles south of Seoul. It was south of Chonan that Associated Press Correspondent Tom Lambert reported the deepest Red thrust south had been halted Sunday by American ground forces.

Lambert's battlefront dispatch did not pinpoint the scene of action but aerial reconnaissance had placed the North Koreans at Chonui, 12 miles south of Chonan and 15 miles north of the Kum River.

Artillery and aircraft aided in halting the Red drive, Lambert reported.

Lambert's dispatch described American infantry dug in along a ridge and getting mortar, artillery and air support against the Reds massing among some lower ridges to the north.

American positions were stretched across the top of a long ridge some miles south of Chonan.

In foxholes and rifle pits on the brow of the hill, the Americans looked north over a small village

To Top 1948 Peak

Record Employment Foreseen For 1950 in U. S. Labor Study

By The Associated Press

The Labor Department said yesterday that economic signs point to record-breaking employment this year, exceeding the 1948 peak of 61,600,000.

The report by Robert C. Goodwin, director of the Department's Bureau of Employment Security, covered results of a new survey of 99 major production centers and 53 smaller communities where unemployment was 7 percent or greater in March.

It said employment had increased in 89 of the major production centers between March and May.

Goodwin reported also that eight areas had been removed from an April list of 38 having labor surpluses of 12 percent or more. One moderate-sized area was added, he said.

"Much of the nonagricultural employment gain stemmed from seasonal activities, intensified this year, especially in the construction industry which is enjoying record-breaking activity," his report to Secretary Tobin stated. "Durable goods industries also moved up strongly, further stimulating gains in service and transportation and expanding trade in many areas, contrary to the usual post-Easter downtrend."

The report was prepared prior to last Friday's announcement that the armed services are to be increased. However, in the opinion of job experts the number which could be added under present law would not have much effect on the Nation's manpower pool as a whole.

The maximum increase in the armed forces allowed is some half million men, but the number to be obtained at this time was not specified.

The Labor Department report, which required some time to assemble and evaluate, did not discuss the possible labor effects of the still-developing Korean situation.

With total employment at 61,482,000 in June, Goodwin said, "There seems little doubt but that employment this year will exceed the 61,600,000 peak established in 1948.

"The bright outlook is Nationwide, but the greatest proportionate increase is due in the Far West. There construction and food processing peaks are still ahead, and all other nonmanufacturing groups are expected to contribute sizable employment increments. Big gains will characterize food processing."

Quakes Rock Colombia, Venezuela

Bogota, Colombia, July 9 (U.P.).—(By Telephone to New York).—A violent earthquake killed at least 150 persons in the province of Cucuta last night and injured more than 300, the Governor of the province said tonight.

In nearby Venezuela, 39 quake deaths were reported.

At least three villages were destroyed, Gov. Lucio Pabon Nunez told the United Press. He said at least 150 bodies had been recovered by late tonight and he feared scores of others were dead.

Three hundred are known to be injured in the city of Cucuta alone

Iowa Paleface, 14, Shoots Indian With Bow and Arrow

Des Moines, July 9 (AP).—A white boy reversed historic form and shot an Indian with a bow and arrow last night.

Sheriff's deputies said the Indian, Edgar Poweshick, 19, of Altoona, Iowa, was wounded three times. The marksman was Richard Millais, 14, an archery enthusiast.

Deputy sheriffs said Richard and his father went to investigate noises around a silver shop the father operates. They found a prowler and Richard shot three times at him.

Officers found Poweshick crouching in some bushes. Justice of the Peace Harry P. Stone fined him $12.50 on a charge of intoxication.

Taft Is Willing To Back Boost In War Funds

Favors 'Any Necessary' Increase for Victory, '500 Million or Billion'

By The Associated Press

Senator Taft (R., Ohio) yesterday said he is willing to support any necessary increase in military funds to provide the men and equipment needed for a decisive victory in Korea.

In talking to a reporter, Taft mentioned the figure of one billion dollars, but added he had no idea how much of a boost will be required.

"It might be 500 million or one billion dollars, I just don't know," Taft added.

Head of the Senate Republican Policy Committee, Taft said he doesn't think Congress will drag its feet on any request for additional military funds.

But he added that he doesn't believe the time has yet arrived to clamp economic controls on the country—a move about which there has been much speculation in Congress.

"The steel industry already is under pressure of unprecedented domestic demands, but if additional steel is needed to manufacture war equipment I think the problem could be worked out on a voluntary basis," he said.

Senator Hill (D., Ala.) said in a separate interview that he doesn't believe there will be any presidential request for economic controls unless the military situation in Korea worsens or unless there is a Communist outbreak elsewhere.

Hill said he expects an early request for additional military funds beyond the $14,680,000,000 cash and contract-making authority provided in the $37,688,000,000 single-package money bill the

Planes 'Let Reds Have It'

Air Force Puts N. Korea Troops Under Round-Clock Attacks

By William Jorden

An American Airbase in Japan (Monday) July 10 (AP).—The Air Force put North Korean combat troops under round-the-clock bombing and strafing last night.

All through the night, B-26 light bombers and rocket-carrying fighters took off at regular intervals. They roared over the area between Pyongsaek and Chonan and let the Northerners have it.

The night-long raids had two purposes: to hit spots of likely enemy concentration and to demoralize the Communists by putting them under attack from the air 24 hours a day.

Attacking planes avoided the Chonui area—the advance point of the Northern push south of Chonan—lest nearby American forces be hit.

Late yesterday the B-26s bombed enemy groupings right at the northern edge of Chonui. Mustangs and jet fighters strafed and blasted the same area with rockets and machineguns.

This correspondent went with one of the flights of attack bombers. Our flight of four planes, each carrying four 1000-pound bombs, took off in the late afternoon.

The lead plane was flown by Capt. Allen H. Blum of Omaha, Nebr. In the plastic nose of the ship, handling the bombsight was Capt. Van C. Burnett of Fort Worth, Tex.

I flew with Capt. Dale P. Simpson of Sweetwater, Tex. Our gunner was Staff Sergt. Austin G. Roberson of Hope, Ark.

When we took off we knew we were going to the Chonan area and that we were going to work over North Korean concentrations reported there. But we were told to contact American observers in the target area to get our specific target.

We took off into an overcast but it disappeared as we neared Japan's west coast. Over the ocean and all the way to the target only an occasional fluffy cloud obscured our view of the sunbathed ground.

One fighter pilot roared over the enemy and then shouted: "I got two rocket hits on that first tank. Did you see it?"

"Good boy," a liaison man answered him. "Give 'em hell."

We had no trouble locating the area where we were to make our strike. One column of white smoke poured out of a building at the

D. C. Guard Tank Kills Brother of District Lawyer

Milford, Del., July 9 (AP).—Thomas Bayard O'Toole, 54, Delaware mortgage banker, was killed and his wife was seriously injured today when an 18-ton M-4 tank crashed into their car six miles south of here, State police reported.

The tank, part of a convoy of Washington, D. C., National Guardsmen, enroute to Fort Miles, Del., for summer maneuvers, was thrown off its course on the highway by a locked caterpillar track, police said.

O'Toole's wife, Charlotte M., and chauffeur, Robert Wilson, were taken in an Army ambulance to Milford Memorial Hospital where Mrs. O'Toole is reported in critical condition.

O'Toole was head of the T. B. O'Toole real estate firm. Survivors include a brother, Attorney Joseph O'Toole of Washington.

Wage Dispute Still Unsettled

Army Running Rock Island RR As Strike Ends by Court Order

Chicago, July 9 (AP).—About 1500 AFL switchmen ended a two-week strike today on the Rock Island Railroad. Trains under Army bosses began rolling again, putting a shine on rusty rails.

The deadlocked tie-up of the 8000-mile line was broken shortly before 1 a.m. (EDT) by a temporary injunction. The court order was issued in Buffalo, N. Y., by Federal Judge John Knight.

The Switchmen's Union promptly complied. Arthur J. Glover, union president, told the strikers to go back to work. He said: "We have no choice now."

The switchmen and the railroad's 21,000 other employes are technically working for the Army, which took over operation of the Rock Island yesterday. The wage dispute which led to the strike still exists.

Today an Army spokesman said the Army does not plan to participate in negotiations with the union. It will retain control until union and railroad have reached a working agreement. There were no plans for immediate resumption of wage talks, but a railroad official said he believed they will be resumed in the near future.

The union president made it clear the switchmen's dispute with the Rock Island and other roads hasn't been settled. His back-to-work order was given under protest.

Earlier, Glover had turned a deaf ear to urging by President Truman that the strike against the Rock Island be ended. And yesterday, when Army officers took over the line, Glover told newsmen he would ignore them unless the Government seized "the profits of the railroad as well as the labor of free men."

In ordering the Army to take over the railroad, Mr. Truman said it was "essential to the national defense and to the security of the Nation" to get the railroad running.

Judge Knight's order set a hearing at Buffalo, the union's headquarters city, July 17 to determine whether the injunction will be extended or made permanent.

Korea Conflict Jolts U. S. Economic Study

In U. N. Council

Korea Move Held Police Job, Not War

New York, July 9 (AP).—Arne Sunde, Norwegian president of the Security Council, said today the United States has been asked to lead an "international police action," not a war, in Korea.

His statement, prepared for a United Nations broadcast, was one of eight written by U. N. leaders for delivery over the NBC network. The other speakers included Ambassador Warren Austin, chief of the United States delegation; Sir Gladwyn Jebb, chief of the British delegation; Keith Shann of Australia; Sir Carl Berendsen, chief of the New Zealand delegation, and Prince Wan of Thailand.

Sunde said the Security Council by its actions had authorized the United States, "the only power at present in the position to offer full scale assistance to the Korean government, to take the military leadership in this campaign."

"Without underestimating the dangers involved," he said, there are "no specific reasons to believe that it will not be possible to keep the conflict within the territory of Korea."

Austin said a unified command in the Korean field under Gen. Douglas MacArthur was of importance because "the quicker it is over the sooner we will take that great advance toward peace in general."

Prince Wan reported Thailand was unable to give military assistance but has offered "foodstuff such as rice" to South Korea.

Sir Carl said "on the inspiring initiative of the United States the Security Council, in my opinion, has comported itself admirably."

Shann declared if the Security Council had not faced up to its responsibilities the "eventual chances of a third World War would have been greatly increased."

Sir Gladwyn asserted the action had shown the Security Council was "far from powerless" even though Soviet obstruction had blocked the creation of a United Nations armed force as contemplated in the charter.

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The Korean conflict has presented the Council of Economic Advisers something of a dilemma in the preparation of the President's Mid-Year Economic Report to Congress.

As of the last week of June, the council had at hand data showing the United States in a stronger economic position than ever in its history. The council's problem now, however, is how to figure the impact of the Korean war on the American economy and to suggest to the President what economic legislation, if any, is needed to deal with it.

In view of the Korean affair, the report, expected before the end of this month, cannot now be written in the optimistic and relatively certain terms that had been thought of two weeks ago.

The general feeling in the council, however—for the most part shared among other Federal economists—is that even though the fighting in Korea will be much costlier and more prolonged than originally thought, it will not pose a difficult economic strain on the United States.

But There's an IF

This estimate is, of course, based on the assumption that the conflict will stay localized in Korea and not spread to a world war or anything like it.

It is felt that in the light of the underlying strength of the economy, an increase in military spending up to as much as 5 billion dollars—directly for Korea and indirectly to build up American and Allied strength—could be sustained without dangerous inflation.

Grounds for this belief rest in figures showing the Nation is now producing goods and services at an annual rate of eight billion dollars above the previous peak, in late 1948. This is after adjusting for price changes and despite recession in 1949.

Furthermore, indications are that this rate will be boosted another 8 billion dollars by the end of this year. This would indicate that the economic and production growths of the country are well above above the rate of acceleration felt necessary to keep the economy expanding at a safe and healthy rate.

Reserve Index to Rise

Another sign of economic strength, it was learned, will be found in the Federal Reserve Board index of industrial production for June. It will probably be at 197, or four points above the previous month, and two above the previous all-time record, rung up in November, 1948.

A further indication of the expansion and absorbtive nature of the economy is the fact that between May and June, when vacationing students swelled the labor force by 2.1 million, all but 300,000 found jobs at once.

In view of these optimistic signs, the council probably will not advise the President to ask Congress for special control and anti-inflation measures to deal with the impact of the Korean situation.

Although such legislation is felt by some economists as desirable, for standby purposes and for emergency use, it is felt that if the President asked for it, his request would touch off a storm of congressional protest. In an election year, charges might fly that the President was using Korea as an excuse to impose economic dictatorship.

May Ask Credit Curbs

One piece of control legislation that Mr. Truman probably will request, however, is restoration of the wartime power of the Federal Reserve Board to limit consumer credit and installment buying.

The President has consistently asked for this authority ever since it lapsed after the war, and believes it necessary, quite apart from the Korean situation.

Consumer credit outstanding is now at the highest dollar level in history, although in proportion to national income, the ratio is not unusual or abnormal.

gets for the navy gunners.

These were believed to be the first British casualties in the Korean war.

A British spokesman said the shell hit the Jamaica's superstructure and was not serious.

The cruiser was hit during an intense American-British naval bombardment in which naval shells started landslides that blocked the main road along Korea's east coast. Red troops, held up by the landslides, were then shelled from the sea.

The action was near Yangyang, 10 road miles north of the thirty-eighth parallel. When the warships retired, big oil fires were burning, General MacArthur said.

The naval guns caused slides on the road between Samchok, 40 miles south of the border, and Imwonjin, about 25 miles south of Samchok. It is down this road the Reds have been trying to advance a force against Pusan, main American base port in South Korea.

The Navy gunfire also brought the earth spilling across the road near Pyonggoktong, 66 road miles south of Samchok. The communique credited the Navy forces with knocking out several bridges along the coast between the thirty-eighth parallel and Yongdok, 115 air miles north.

Second Division Given Alert

after D-Day. For 70 days without rest, it fought through the hedgerows to St. Lo and then turned westward to assist in the capture of Brest.

After being severely mauled in the Ardennes breakthrough of December, 1944, the Second held on until the German advance was halted, and was pulled out for refitting. Then it attacked again in February and rolled on over the Rhine and across Germany to Czechoslovakia, where VE-Day halted it at Pilsen.

How soon the units alerted yesterday could be placed at the front or even in supporting distance could not be determined, even on the basis of an educated guess. The First Marine Division, alerted a week ago, was still on the West Coast awaiting ships to move it.

In any event, arrival of the Second Infantry and First Marine Divisions in the Far East Command would raise Gen. Douglas MacArthur's ground combat strength to six divisions. He has three infantry divisions and one cavalry division (operating as infantry) already with him. At least one of these, the Twenty-fourth Infantry Division, has been shipped to Korea and some of its elements have been in combat since July 4.

Ohio Colonel Listed as Casualty

The names of a colonel and two enlisted men killed in action in Korea and two men wounded were announced yesterday by the Army.

Col. Robert R. Martin, 48, of Ohio, was reported killed. The highest-ranking officer so far reported a casualty in the Korean fighting, Colonel Martin entered the service as a second lieutenant immediately after graduating from Purdue University in 1924. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary Vella Martin of Kentucky, now in the Far East.

The men officially reported killed were:

Pvt. Kenneth Shadrick, son of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Shadrick, Wyoming, W. Va., and Pfc. Dale L. Magers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis W. Magers, Moses Lake, Wash. Magers previously had been reported missing on an airplane flight from Japan to Korea.

The two men reported wounded were Pvt. Jack L. Twiford, South Sioux City, Nebr., and Pvt. Nelson E. Young, Roxbury, Mass.

Pleven Likely To Be Joined By Socialists

Paris, July 9 (U.P.).—The Socialist Party took its first big step today toward joining other middle-of-the-road parties to form a solid coalition cabinet and end France's 16-day-old political crisis.

The Socialists called their national council into session Monday to decide formally on whether to take part in a coalition cabinet headed by Premier-designate Rene Pleven, outgoing defense minister.

Political observers said calling of the meeting was a sign the Socialists may vote for participation. They previously had refused even to call the national council together.

Socialist Secretary-General Guy Mollett conferred with Pleven for an hour and a half this afternoon.

For months, the Socalists have refused to take part in the government, although generally supporting it. It was their vote that toppled the coalition of Georges Bidault two weeks ago Saturday and the short-lived cabinet of Radical Socialist Henri Queuille last week.

Point 4 Slash 'Madness,' CIO Says

The CIO told the Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday that its cut in the Government's Point Four program from 35 million dollars to 10 million dollars is "economy gone mad" and would furnish "indirect aid to the Kremlin."

In a telegram to the committee, Jacob S. Potofsky, chairman of the CIO International Committee, and Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative director, said a restoration of the funds is "necessary to the success of our foreign policy, of which the Korean development is a part."

President Truman's Point Four program is designed to help people in underdeveloped areas of the world to improve their living standards by better methods of agriculture, road-building, health and sanitation, and so on. The CIO said this program is "a first line of defense for the Democratic way of life."

Cut-Off Battalion Fights Way Free

to a line of low ridges among which the Reds were reported massing.

Mortar shells passed overhead, bursting in one of the shallow valleys.

Suddenly the throatier whistle of artillery volleys took over, pouring in on the same targets as the mortars were firing on.

"Boy, listen to that! My morale is 300 percent higher than this morning!" exclaimed a grimy, bearded sergeant as he leaned back luxuriously in his foxhole.

Down the slope, a thin-faced captain asked an artillery liaison man, "Did that do it, Joe?"

"Yup," Joe replied. "The observer says he can see them now. They're confused and running."

Another volley roared in.

First Lieut. Delbert Gates of Joinerville, Tex., a veteran of service on the 38th Parallel during the former American occupation of South Korea, raised his head from a foxhole and glanced over the valley.

"Let me take a look," he said. "I haven't seen those guys (the North Korean Reds) for 13 months." He swept the village, valley and ridges with binoculars.

Down in the village several Americans walked leisurely along the road towards a bridge that had been blown to prevent Red tanks from crossing.

There was a minute of indecision over the identity of the planes, sniffing around the village and ridges like terriers. Then the planes dived in strafing and rocket runs and their identity was settled.

The GI's came out of their holes like spectators at a football game when a halfback breaks away. The Mustangs dived again, rockets whooshing from beneath their wings which bore Australian markings.

"Look at that," exulted a doughboy. "One valley in a million with enemy in it and those guys find it. Ain't unification wonderful?"

The Mustangs beat up the far side of the ridge for half an hour and then were joined by several F-80 jets.

One of the jets, sweeping widely, poured a short burst of machine-gun fire into our positions.

This endeavor elicited profane indignation. The pilot's ancestry was questioned cursingly and his ability and eyesight condemned as the GI's spilled back into their holes.

The muttering continued until a laconic officer reported to headquarters by telephone, "One of our aircraft strafed our position, no damage or injuries."

The jets whistled back to the valley, passed a fluttering observation plane which looked like a moth among eagles. The Mustangs took protective cover over our ridgetop.

After several more strafing runs, the jets and Mustangs departed. The observation plane passed over a relaxed group of GI's.

High on the brow of our ridgetop second Lieut. Bert Van Engel of Milwaukee, artillery spotter, began calling in the guns again.

The shells started falling again. South Koreans, fighting on the right flank of the American advanced units, counterattacked in the Umsong-Chungju area some 31 miles northeast of Chonan.

General MacArthur said that although heavily outnumbered, the South Koreans "temporarily blunted the advance of North Korean forces."

Reporting from Taejon, Associated Press Correspondent O. H. P. King said South Koreans were so delighted with the stand of their men against heavy odds that promotions were ordered for all officers and enlisted men participating in the battle. They will also be given cash awards.

The South Korean spokesman listed 21 North Korean prisoners taken, 700 rifles and four 76 mm. guns seized, 20 Russian-made jeeps and seven trucks destroyed.

The North Korean radio at Pyongyang promptly broadcast a counterclaim that Communist troops had captured Chinchon, 25 miles east of Chonan and killed 400 "enemy troops." The announcement did not identify the troops.

General MacArthur's headquarters previously had placed the South Koreans at Chinchon.

American and British warships provided floating artillery for the harassment of enemy targets along Korea's rugged eastern coast.

Roads skirting the cliffs about 25 miles south of Samchok crumbled as 6-inch shels were poured into them. Landslides from the chalky limestone cliffs poured down, making the roads impassable where North Koreans had been gathering men and equipment for a push south on Pusan, main United States supply port in Korea only 125 miles west of Japan.

As the North Korean columns built up, naval units took them under fire. The precise results were not announced.

SUNDAY COMMUNIQUE—Six North Korean divisions (solid arrows) are carrying brunt of drive which threatens to outflank defense lines in western South Korea, according to General MacArthur's headquarters. South Koreans and United States troops (open arrows), supported by aircraft, have, temporarily at least, blunted the drives along a ridge some miles south of Chonan. Front-line reports places the Reds in Chonui, less than 20 miles from the Kum River, a natural defense line

Chinese Red Troops Reported Moving North

Hongkong, July 9 (AP).—Independent Chinese newspaper reports claimed over the weekend that Communist Gen. Lin Piao has been ordered to pull his conquering Fourth Field Army out of Hainan Island and Kwangtung Province and rush them north, possibly for action in Korea.

Canton reports said 50,000 of his troops were there now from Hainan Island and southwest Kwangtung Province. Some, the newspapers said, are en route to Manchuria by way of Hankow.

main road fork in the town of Choniu. Twelve miles to the north in Chonan, a series of fires raged all along the main north-south road.

An observer plane had spotted a group of Red tanks along the road just north of Chonui. That's where we were told to put our bomb load.

We circled once. We spotted the target, then moved off to let some jet fighters go in for a strafing run.

Then we leveled out, went over the tanks, and Captain Burnett loosed his bomb load. The other three planes dropped theirs immediately. Clouds of smoke and fire abscured the target area. We wouldn't know until later how much damage we had done.

We held formation and headed home.

We put down on the runway as darkness settled.

They made their reports and then looked for bunks. They would be up at dawn to go out again.

Korean Reds Claim Sinking of 'Battleship'

Tokyo (Monday), July 10 (U.P.).—The Communist radio at Pyongyang said today that North Korean forces had sunk "a battleship" in an engagement with a "powerful enemy unit" off the east coast of Korea yesterday.

Pilots Puzzled By Lack of Red Air Opposition

An American Air Base in Japan, July 9 (U.P.).—Pilots, group commanders and staff officers of the Far Eastern Air Forces are puzzled by the lack of activity of the North Korean Air Force.

"Is a surprise in store—will our fighters suddenly be caught by swarms of Red planes while they are strafing at low level?" an officer asked.

"Their ground forces have been so successful, and the weather has been so miserable, that there is no need for them to show their hand in the air now," another officer said.

On one thing all agreed: that the North Korean Air Force can count on reinforcements—from Russia—whenever they ask for more planes.

The Reds are not believed to be short of aviation gasoline yet.

For five days there has been no aerial opposition to United States fighter and bamber planes.

Only two instances of Red air activity have been noted. The first was an attack by four Yak planes with South Korean markings on South Korean targets. The second occurred when a lone IL-10 dropped eight bombs, five of them duds, on the area of Taegu in southeastern Korea yesterday.

It is estimated that the North Koreans had about 200 planes when the war began two weeks ago.

Up to now only fighter and fighter-bomber types have been observed in action or on the ground. These are the Yaks and the IL series, both Russian made.

The IL-10 is a two-seat ground-support type with a single engine, 2000-horsepower, with a speed of about 290 miles.

The Yak-9, is a single-seat fighter or attack plane with varying types of armament.

George Pushes Action on Bill For 1-Billion Excise-Tax Cut

By The Associated Press

Senator George (D., Ga.) yesterday said he will push along the billion-dollar excise-tax-slashing bill and expressed hope that the grave Korean situation may "improve in the next 10 days or two weeks."

At the same time, George said he favors a deeper cut than that voted by the House in the present 20-percent cabaret tax on "dine and dance" checks. The House set it at 15.

And he said Senators may "be able to give some help" to the phonograph and record industry pictured in testimony as up against declining sales and increasing television competition. The House made no cut in the 10-percent manufacturers excise tax.

George is chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, which expects to wind up public hearings this week on the House-passed bill lowering excise taxes by $1,010,000,000 a year. New revenues, chiefly from big corporations, would make up this loss.

Some lawmakers point out that any tax cut might be dropped if events took such a serious turn as to send costs much higher.

Senator George said he agreed with hotel managers and others that a big reduction in the 20-percent Federal tax on "dine and dance" rooms, including night clubs, might actually increase Federal revenues.

He said witnesses will be heard this week on the taxboosting provisions of the bill. These include a 433 million dollar increase in taxes on big corporations and closing of numerous so-called loopholes in present revenue laws.

Everything at Steak!

By Albert Parchey Mesirow

THE FOURTH of July, I find, is an occasion that stimulates any inclination one might have towards philosophical rumination. Watching the commemorative "rockets red glare" (before it started to rain Tuesday evening) it occurred to me that we native Americans are doubly blessed in that we inherit few rigid conventions in the all-important matter of food. True, there are regional dishes that are preferred in certain sections, and the descendants of immigrants to America are exposed to certain "old country" dishes, but by and large, our national taste in food is as catholic as our population. This puts us in the happy position of being able to adopt for our own the foreign foods that appeal to us individually, without contravention of national lines. We can enjoy Russian borscht or German hassenpfeffer, French escargot or Italian spaghetti, shashlik or tortillas or loetfisk with equal relish! A small thing, perhaps, but comforting. One of the innumerable pebbles that in the aggregate make the mountain of our Independence!

Here at Parchey's, we have gone directly to France for the recipe for our onion soup, which is a notable prelude to the hot weather lunch or dinner. It soothes the turbulent inner man, adds flavor to the entire meal, stimulates the flow of gastric juices and paves the way for the further enjoyment of living. In the preparation of our onion soup, we avoid the common mistakes that have resulted in America's over-all indifference to this truly regal dish. We use plenty of onions . . . big, juicy fellows, sweet and tender. We cook these onions first in olive oil, and do not add butter until the thin slices are limpid and snowy-white. (We never allow them to become crisp or brown!) Finally, we add, with the salt and pepper, a modicum of sugar, and this is what gives our onion soup its distinctive flavor. Served with a few heaping spoonfuls of freshly grated Parmesan cheese, Parchey's onion soup is a rare gustatory treat, and well worth any man's twenty-five cents for a generous cupful! Try it today. Our address: 19th at K St. N.W.

In spite of its nomenclatural implications, the filet mignon is as American as apple pie or watermelon. And while we have often dwelt, in this column, on the tenderness and tastiness of the delicate mushroom sauce with which we generally drench our filets, there is much to be said for the traditionally American custom of simply floating the perfectly broiled filet in a sea of melted sweet butter. Granting that the habitual use of melted butter on filet mignon (or on anything else) will do nothing for the human figure except fill it out, there are still few edibles that can contribute more to one's satisfaction. So I am taking the liberty of suggesting that even the most disciplined dieter might do himself (or herself) a distinct favor by coming to Parchey's and leaping over the traces once in a while . . . for the sake of the soul. Order our delicate but heartily-flavored onion soup. Follow this with a great, thick filet mignon, bubbling with rich natural juices and swimming in a sea of melted butter. Eschew the French fried potatoes as a gesture to your diet, if you wish, but partake liberally of our secret-recipe cole slaw . . . in which the creaming agent is nonfattening buttermilk. And if you should put on an ounce or so, just skip breakfast the next morning. You'll probably still be too stuffed to enjoy it, anyhow! Remember the address? 19th at K St. N.W.

We have been happy to welcome, as old friends, the following nice people during the past weeks: Mr. W. S. Burton, Miss Polly L. Harris, Mrs. Louise O'Connor, Miss Alice Bain, Mr. Walter E. Weigel, Dr. James J. Greenes, Mr. John S. Patton and Mrs. F. M. Coughlin. New faces we were pleased to greet included those of Mr. Frank B. Brady, Mrs. H. Steuart Robey, Mr. and Mrs. Stephan M. Gatti and Mr. M. Massey. Come again soon!

Our entire staff is taking what I believe to be a pardonable pride in our new menu. I'd appreciate your comments on this masterpiece of the printer's art. And if you would like a reprint of the intriguing discourse on the back cover, simply ask the waiter. It's called "How to Get Rich," and, although filched from a manuscript produced in the Seventeenth Century, is full of fiscal axioms still pertinent today. 3 Area Navy Reservists Sign for Active Duty dren. They reside at 3122 Buena Vista ter. se.

The third volunteer, Henry S. Wickham, 26, 1754 Massachusetts ave. nw., is a business machine operator in the Navy Department's Accounts Division. He held a rating of yeoman 2/cl. during his three and one half years' service in the Pacific on troop ships.

The Potomac River Naval Command, where the three applied, went on a seven-day-week schedule to handle such applications. The Reserve Recruiting Office at the Naval Gun Factory, 8th and M sts. se., will be open from 8 a. m. to 9 p. m.

The command also sent out 10,000 letters to officers and enlisted reserves in critical specialties urging them to sign up for active duty.

Downtown the Navy and Marine Corps recruiting stations at 14th st. and Pa. ave., nw., stayed open all day yesterday, the first time they have been in operation on Sunday since the end of World War II.

The Navy unit had about 30 telephone inquiries from reservists interested in signing up and four men were interviewed about joining the Navy. The station and substations at 1202 Good Hope rd. se. and postoffices at Hyattsville, Md., Silver Spring, Md., and Alexandria, Va., have been placed on a Monday-through-Saturday schedule, 8 a. m. to 4:30 p. m.

The Marine unit had seven men inquire about signing up, but none were accepted because of physical shortcomings. Several Marine reservists called in about going on active duty.

The Air Force, which earlier called for reserves to take active duty, yesterday spelled out which reserves it was most interested in.

"The greatest current need for officers is for those in the Reserve or Air National Guard who have been trained as navigators, bombardiers, communications, radio and radar specialists, medical and dental officers, weather specialists and armament officers," the service announced.

Among enlisted men, the Air Force is seeking aircraft and engine mechanics, radar and radio operators, communications personnel, armaments specialists and medical personnel.

Officers interested should apply to the commanding general of the numbered air force which currently has their records and enlisted men may do so through their Reserve unit or the Air Force recruiting station.

Taft Is Willing To Add Billion

Senate will begin debating Tuesday.

Chairman Tydings (D., Md.) of the Senate Armed Forces Committee agreed that it's too early yet to tell whether it will be necessary for Congress to take any action toward mobilization of industry.

"We are in a period now where we're looking ahead without enough facts to predicate a sure course of action," he said. "If conditions grow worse, if the flame set in Korea spreads, if new forces become involved, if it is going to be a major job, then we've got to do a lot of things that we otherwise would not have to do," he said in a broadcast.

Tydings said that for the moment he doesn't expect any order mobilizing the National Guard or the reserves.

Tydings wouldn't guess how many American divisions will be needed in Korea to bring a decisive victory there. But he added that the United States has committed itself to winning such a victory.

Senator Wiley (R., Wis.), top Republican on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in the absence of Senator Vandenburg (R., Mich.), called on other members of the United Nations to supply troops to fight the Korean Communists.

He criticized American representatives at the United Nations for what he said was their failure to impress on other nations the need for active participation, adding in a statement:

"If the present situation continues, the American people will get to feel that the United Nations is willing to fight to the last American."

Wiley accused the Administration of "ineptness and bungling" in handling the Korean affair."

He said developments disclosed (1) that the United States didn't have the trained men or the equipment on hand; (2) that its intelligence service was "caught flat footed" by the Communist invasion; (3) that the State Department was "so intent on appeasing Russia that it made us withdraw" occupation forces from Korea, and (4) that the public is being confused by conflicting announcements about American military moves.

He said Secretary of Defense Johnson ought to make a report to Congress on what steps have been taken to prevent possible attacks on American cities, possible attacks by Russian submarines on American ships, and possible Communist outbreaks elsewhere in the world.

The Senate Armed Services Committee has called for a report by military leaders Tuesday on the Korean situation.

Farm Props' Hourly Cost Set at $77,750

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Uncle Sam has been losing $77,750 an hour, 24 hours a day, on farm price supports so far this year, the Commodity Credit Corporation, which conducts the program, revealed last week.

That's about $1300 a minute, being spent to keep prices high and farmers happy.

The report of the financial condition and operations of CCC as of May 31, stated:

"CCC showed a net loss of $625,233,622 for the first 11 months of the fiscal year 1950. A net loss of $583,786,782 resulted from all program operations, including adjustments of reserves for estimated losses, and there was an excess of $41,446,840 of interest and general overhead expense over interest and miscellaneous income. The realized loss on price support operations amounted to $201,308,358."

How much are price supports costing the country? There appear to be many answers to this question. The financial statements of CCC, like many such compilations, are themselves confusing.

Balanced Until 1948

Up until 1948 the books were about balanced. The war bailed out the program, particularly in corn, wheat, cotton and wool. Without the war demand, it is probable the loss would have gone into billions.

Since 1948 CCC books show a "realized loss" of 588 million dollars. This means that this loss has already been sustained—the commodites on which it was taken have been disposed of, sold, given away or destroyed.

However, the books also show 629 million dollars set aside as "reserve for losses" on commodities owned by the Government. These commodities on May 31 represented an investment of 2625 million dollars. There is a daily deterioration in any commodities in storage, even such stable items as wheat, corn and cotton. There are scores of other ways losses could be incurred—mold, rodents, water, fire, shrinkage, and so forth. Also the price might go down.

Some commodities in Government hands are called "semi-perishable" but are in fact highly perishable. These include butter, of which CCC now has 175 million pounds which cost about 100 million bucks. It has 300 million pounds of dried milk worth about 50 millionffi 57 million pounds of cheese worth about 20 million; 100 million pounds of dried eggs worth 125 million; and so on.

Much May Be Needed

It is safe to predict that much of that 629 million in reserve may be needed. In addition, CCC has set aside 84 million dollars in reserve to meet possible losses on loans it has made on commodities or Government-guaranteed loans made by other agencies. These loans amount to 1185 million—of which 84 million is certainly not too much to hold in reserve.

Another five million is set aside as reserve against losses on 146 million dollars worth of notes and accounts receivable due CCC.

The total of all these is 1344 million dollars—a little more than a billion and one-third. Of this immense figure 588 million dollars represent losses already realized and 756 million is the amount CCC in its judgment has set aside to meet potential losses.

That totes up to about $90 for every man, woman and child in the United States.

In spite of all the hullabaloo in the last year, the most costly price support operation this year again was potatoes. They have cost about 85 million dollars to date.

Next comes peanuts, for which 39 million dollars were charged off up to May 31. (Congress this year voted to increase the acreage for peanuts, in spite of this mounting loss.) Wheat losses reached 25 million dollars in the 11 months; corn 16 million; dried milk 12 million so far; wool 10 million; eggs 18 million; grain sorghum 10 million.

New Rules On Milk

If the Commissioners have trouble making up their minds after the hearing today on what kind of milk regulation the District should have, it will not be for lack of pressure on both sides. On the one hand is the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, whose 1700 farmer-members furnish about 85 percent of the milk consumed in Washington. They are interested in maintaining the existing sanitary regulations. On the other hand are the dairies which have resisted the near-monopoly of the association. They are anxious to see the 1925 regulation rewritten to permit chemical sterilization of milk containers on farms in place of the expensive steam process now required. In our opinion, the arguments are strongly in favor of liberalizing the law.

Some of the points made by the milk producers in this connection have been quite misleading. The question has nothing to do with whether babies are to be properly protected against disease; nor does it concern the quality of milk (i. e., purity, butterfat content). It is simply whether to continue to adhere to the outmoded steam process or to accept the modern chemical sterilization approved as standard by the United States Public Health Service and used extensively elsewhere. The Milk Producers Association has a vested interest in maintaining the steam requirements, since its members are, generally speaking, the only farmers equipped to provide steam sterilization. The absurdity of this requirement is demonstrated by the fact that chemical sterilization is approved for use in restaurants and even in dairies themselves.

In one other respect the argument of the association is misleading. It purports to show that the price of home-delivered milk in Washington is below the national average. According to Department of Agriculture figures, however, the price in Washington is one of the highest in the country for a large city adjoining a major milkshed. Moreover, the association is a sort of closed-shop union which virtually sets its own prices. It was convicted in Federal Court here in May of conspiracy to hold up prices through so-called "full supply" contracts with dairies. The steam sterilization requirement, of course, plays into the hands of the producer monopoly.

The Commissioners have it within their power to authorize a sensible, modern regulation on milk sanitation, and we earnestly hope they will do so. At the same time it is apparent that the Milk Act of 1925 needs a general overhauling, particularly with respect to the ban on importation of milk from farms other than those inspected by the District Health Department. That overhauling can be accomplished by the Miller bill now in the House. Both liberalized sanitary requirements and permission for milk imports are essential, it seems to us, to give the public the benefit of genuine competition in the milk industry.

Commies And The NEA

Almost without opposition, the National Education Association changed its by-laws last week so as to exclude from its membership any Communist or any member of a subversive organization. The action is indicative of the temper of the American people, educators no less than others. Undoubtedly the teachers who voted by secret ballot for this change are aware of the difficulties that may arise in identifying "subversives." They must also have been reluctant to sanction any practice that might result in the "branding" of teachers. But these reasons for restraint were overshadowed in the minds of the great majority by the danger of allowing Communist propagandists to function in our free schools.

The NEA was saved from the unpleasant duty of expelling the New York City Teachers Union by its withdrawal from the organization. The Teachers Union had previously been thrown out of the CIO and various teacher associations for alleged communistic leanings, and its presence in the NEA was a source of embarrassment which could not longer be endured. The elementary fact is that no individual or organization that is bound by a "party line" has any place in the American school system. The public schools are a bulwark of freedom, and they must not be permitted in any degree to fall under the influence of those who seek to take advantage of freedom in order to destroy it.

To our way of thinking, the National Education Association has set a pattern that may well be followed by other educational groups. Teachers who naturally resent being asked to sign non-Communist oaths or declarations may help clear the atmosphere by driving from their own organizations the occasional Moscow propagandist who may be masquerading as a teacher. This is not a pleasant task. It will go against the grain of many teachers. But so long as a center of world power is attempting to destroy our freedom by infiltration, it is a necessary task. The effectiveness with which it is performed is likely to have an important bearing upon the growing demand for non-Communist oaths from teachers.

Rock Island Seizure

To end the strike against the Rock Island and no doubt for the purpose of heading off threatened strikes of major proportions by conductors, trainmen and yardmen, the President ordered the Army to seize the road. The union remained defiant, however, until the Department of Justice obtained a temporary injunction directing the strikers to return to work. Arthur J. Glover, head of the Switchmen's Union, protests the action on the ground that the President has said the United States is not at war. "Is the democratic President of a democratic country saying that no railroad union can conduct a legal strike in peacetime?" he asked. The answer is that the United States is technically still at war with Germany and Japan. Since the President has no power to seize struck railroads in time of peace, he is relying for justification of his action on a law passed in 1916 authorizing seizure of any transportation system if it becomes necessary in time of war. That forgotten statute was unearthed more than two years ago when the Army seized the railroads to prevent a Nation-wide strike of engineers, firemen and switchmen.

In an editorial of May 11, 1948, discussing the seizure order this newspaper said:

> Technically the country is still at war, but the President justified his action in the name of "public health and the public welfare." The indisputable fact is that an extended Nation-wide railroad strike would be disastrous in time of either war or peace. The President ought to have well-defined powers for dealing with such an emergency, without having to rely upon a wartime measure that may soon be inapplicable. . . . It is a problem that will have to be met and the national interest would be served best by meeting it before rather than after a peacetime emergency has arisen.

In another editorial of July 3, 1948, written a few days before the roads were restored to their owners, we characterized Government seizure as "a devious, clumsy, inadequate device for dealing with a problem that should be tackled in forthright fashion." We also pointed out that seizure does not insure settlement of disputes, and if it becomes a recognized means of dealing with strikes it may lead to permanent Government ownership and control of the railroads.

We have quoted these opinions at some length to emphasize our conviction that unless railway unions forgo their right to strike in defiance of the recommendations of impartial fact-finding boards, legislative banning of strikes and provisions for Government seizure in peacetime as a last resort will be necessary. There is reason to believe that public opinion will strongly support such drastic measures if transportation tie-ups continue. It is worth noting that in the Rock Island seizure order the danger to the national security of the strike against that road is only one of the reasons advanced for the action taken to end it. Now, as in 1948, the President stressed the effect on public health and welfare of interruptions to rail transportation. In other words, the seizure order can be justified as a peacetime measure, although circumstances compelled the President to rely on his powers as Commander in Chief of the Armed Forces and on the 1916 seizure statute.

Payments Union

The Marshall Plan countries have at last approved the plan for a European payments union. Its purpose is to establish a system of clearing current accounts among the members that will in effect make their currencies interchangeable, and facilitate the abolition of trade barriers and bilateral trade agreements. Milton Katz, Averell Harriman's successor as ECA ambassador in Europe, hails the agreement as a vital step in European integration. And William C. Foster, acting ECA administrator, says it "can be one of the most significant and far-reaching developments of the European recovery program." Until the detailed provisions of the agreement are known, it will be impossible for outside observers to judge whether these hopes are well founded.

The plan provides for a central pool from which participating countries would receive lines of credit. Members running a trade deficit would draw on pooled funds, while creditor countries would receive additions to their accounts. Settlements in gold or dollars would be made at specified intervals, and members would be subject to penalties for permitting their trade to get too far out of balance. It remains to be seen whether the plan affords adequate safeguards against over-liberal extension of credits that would result in inflation in creditor countries and encourage debtor countries to buy as usual. Doubts exist, too, as to the possibility of putting pressure on member countries to balance their trade accounts and reform financial, economic and trading policies that prevent the expansion of trade on a sound competitive basis. Unless the payments union is given some power to influence the policies of recalcitrant members, the purpose of the clearing system, which is to ease the way for needed reforms of this sort, might be defeated.

To be sure, about 50 percent of the member countries' trade has already been freed from import quotas; but quotas have been lifted, generally speaking, on goods that offer no serious competition to domestic products. Moreover, in a number of instances, countries that have abandoned quotas have retained protective import duties that serve the same purpose. The payments union will make it easier for members to speed the reduction of these trade barriers but at best it is an auxiliary aid.

The fact that so many nations with conflicting interests have succeeded in reaching an agreement of this kind is, nevertheless, a significant advance toward cooperation. It shows that western Europeans recognize that united action is required to build up an integrated European economy and lay the foundation for accelerated economic expansion benefiting all of them. This cooperative approach strengthens the hope that the payments union will serve the purpose for which it is intended.

M. Pleven Tries

It is now more than a fortnight that France has been without a real government. In the ordinary affairs of life, which are largely ruled by custom and accommodation, this makes very little difference. The day-to-day administration of public affairs proceeds under the direction of the cabinet chosen by M. Queuille, which, although repudiated by the Assembly, has a kind of interim authority in such matters. What is lacking is a body of ministers capable of initiating policies either in the internal or the international sphere. And in view of the tensions produced everywhere in the world by the Korean war the need of such a government is felt almost as acutely outside France as within.

The latest to try his luck at the apparently almost impossible task of forming a cabinet satisfactory to a majority of the schizophrenic French Assembly is M. Rene Pleven, well known here in Washington where for a time he was the representative of General de Gaulle and his Free French Committee. M. Pleven, however, is not a Gaullist in the present political connotations of the term. He is aligned with the Democratic and Socialist Union, one of the lesser parties of the right center, which in its general political outlook is close to the Radical Socialists, the party of M. Queuille.

M. Pleven's hopes of success seem bound up with his chances of inducing the Socialists to participate in his cabinet. The indications are that the Socialists will agree to this only upon their own terms. One of these terms, as outlined by M. Guy Mollet, a Socialist leader, is assurance of legislation to increase the wages of government employes, the question on which the Socialists, by combining with the Communists and some elements of the extreme right, forced the downfall of the Bidault government. If M. Pleven accepts the Socialists' terms, he will then be under the necessity of persuading the parties of the center to accept them, too. But it is equally probable that these parties will also insist upon making terms. An influential element among the Popular Republicans appears determined to push forward legislation to provide for religious education in state-supported schools, evidently fearful that this issue, so important to the Catholic electorate from which the party derives its main support, may be snatched away by the Gaullists. The Radical Socialists are likely to demand legislation for reform of the electoral laws, in the belief that the present system of proportional representation has deprived them of parliamentary strength commensurate with their actual importance in French political life.

It is clear, then, that in calling upon M. Pleven, President Auriol has come pretty well to the bottom of the barrel of possible successors to M. Bidault. It is also clear that the French crisis marks the disintegration of the "Third Force" as an important influence in European political life—that the factors tending to separate the parties of the center are stronger than the factors that for a time drew them together. If on Tuesday, when M. Pleven must face the Assembly with his nominations, his cabinet, too, is repudiated by the majority, only two possibilities appear to remain. One would be to precipitate the dissolution of the Assembly and to set in motion the machinery for a general election. This, however, seems out of the question for one good reason: An interim government to supervise the elections would have to be named, representing all parties—including the Communist! The other course would be a proclamation of national danger by the President, calling upon all parties (except the Communist) to submerge their differences in a new Union Sacree.

Steel Sales Dollar

The United States Steel Corporation offers convincing refutation of the charge that its profits are excessive by pointing out that the average rate of return on its investment during the period 1902-49 was 5.18 percent, less than 6 percent on the average during the past ten years, and slightly below 8 percent in 1949. Moreover, about 41 cents of every dollar received by the company from sales last year was needed to pay wages, salaries and pensions and 39 cents to pay for products and services bought, while 5 cents per dollar of receipts represented the cost of wear and exhaustion of facilities. Taxes took nearly 8 cents of the sales dollar, whereas dividends on both preferred and common stock accounted for only 3.5 cents. The 3.7 cents remaining after a limited deduction for interest was reinvested in the business.

Thus it is evident that Federal, State and local governments received the lion's share of the company's income after payment of operating expenses—182 million dollars—while dividends and reinvested income amounted to only 166 million. It is worth noting, too, that approximately 932 million of the 2.3 billion dollars of United States Steel's receipts from sales was redistributed in the form of wages and salaries to employes, making them the chief beneficiaries of the company's operations. Indirectly, too, the 900 million expended for the products and services of other producers put money in the hands of workers and salaried people.

Freedom Of Religion

The United Press survey on the status of the main human freedoms in 36 countries, published in your issue of July 5, was an interesting piece of reporting. The UP disclaimed complete validity for its survey by stating that the findings were "only approximate." In the next breath, however, it stated that the survey was "as accurate as men who are veterans at reporting can humanly be."

Without being too carping, just how accurate are some of these men on the spot? Several examples in the category of Freedom of Religion come immediately to mind.

Take the UP man in Switzerland, for instance. He gives his country a 100 percent score, in spite of the provision in the Swiss constitution which restrains the Jesuit Order from engaging in any kind of public activity, including giving sermons in churches. This provision had a dramatic application recently when Father Ricardo Lombardi, the distinguished Italian preacher, who was making a tour of the Western nations on a peace crusade, was forbidden to preach in Switzerland because he was a Jesuit. This may appear to be a relatively minor matter, but it does indicate that a perfect score in regard to religious liberty in Switzersland should not be registered.

Sweden was also given a 100 percent rating in the field of religious liberty. Those Swedes who are not Lutherans would undoubtedly quarrel with this figure. In Sweden only Lutherans may be elected to Parliament, enter the diplomatic service, or teach in the public schools. Non-Lutheran churches are not legally able to hold property. If two Catholics, for instance, become engaged in Sweden, they must publish the banns for their forthcoming marriage through the Lutheran pastor. Catholic baptisms, marriages, burials, and even changes of residence must be registered with the Lutheran pastor, who is the official local registrar throughout the country.

Turn now to Spain. Protestant spokesmen in America have been vehement in proclaiming that Protestants in Spain do not enjoy real religious liberty; but the disparities they cite are certainly no worse than those suffered by non-Lutherans in Sweden. Yet Sweden gets 100 in the UP "on the spot" survey; Spain gets 60. Why?

Colombian Support

On many occasions during the Colombian presidential campaign it was said that President-elect Dr. Laureano Gomez was an enemy of the United States. Those of your readers who are concerned about Latin-American affairs may be interested in the recent statement made by Dr. Gomez regarding the latest international events. Such statement clearly shows that Dr. Gomez, far from being an enemy of the United States, cherishes the most friendly and cordial sentiments toward this great country and firmly intends to govern in accordance with the highest spirit of continental solidarity.

Dr. Gomez's statement reads as follows:

"Regarding the Communist aggression against Korea, the message sent by President Ospina-Perez to President Truman is a fair and commendable action because it faithfully interprets the sentiments of the Colombian people concerning the surprising act of force taken place in the Far East which, by disregarding the persevering efforts made by the United Nations in order to regulate international life according to juridical principles, threatens world peace.

"In such grave emergency there is no doubt whatsoever that the government and people of Colombia are closely identified with the President and the people of the United States in the endeavor to secure a strict compliance with the resolutions of the Security Council. Colombia will meet without any hesitancy the duties inherent to her position as member of the United Nations and the Organization of the American States, especially in a case of such undeniable characteristics of aggression as the one to which the Republic of Korea has been subjected."

Slot Machine Ban

Why has the House Interstate Commerce Committee buried the bill to bar interstate shipment of slot machines? This bill already had been passed by the Senate and has little relation to whatever the Kefauver crime investigation may turn up. Surely legislators do not need the report of the Kefauver committee to tell them that slot machines are an evil wherever they are.

"Peace, It's Wonderful"

I signed the World Peace Appeal with no knowledge of its origin. Your June 30 editorial, "Peace, It's Wonderful," would not dissuade me from signing it again in spite of its Soviet roots!

I'll back all strides toward peace with equal vigor. I believe the desire for peace is so fundamental in all human beings that, no matter how any peace movement starts, it will lead away from a disastrous war.

Granted that the World Peace Appeal is too limited, outlawing only atomic war instead of war in general; but from any viewpoint (other than imperialistic) it is a step in the right direction—as your editorial belatedly points out.

I firmly believe that World War II brought most people to the realization that any future conflict will be devastating, whether atomic arms are used or not. The single individual, together with many more single individuals from all over the world, can stop war. These many single individuals are the foundation of democracy—and they want someone to lead them to peace.

Why doesn't the United States do something about it?

What happened to McMahon's proposal?

All the Korean crisis has stimulated in Congress is more millions for the materials of war. Why not an equal effort for peace? The best way to tilt the balance of the cold war away from a fighting war is to take the peace offensive. But let's not wait until it's too late.

Understanding For Korea

One of the several reactions of Americans to the incident in Korea seems to be a kind of pleasure based on the thought that here is something "clear-cut and definite." Some of our commentators have enlarged on this particular reaction to a marked degree giving strong substantiation to the belief in many parts of the world that our country has for a long time planned a hot war. I greatly deplore the picture of American people so presented.

The much more common attitude among this people, I believe, is that of taking this incident and the action of our Administration, later supported by the United Nations Security Council, without surprise, certainly, but as a challenge to careful soul-searching. The facts of what took place are now clear to everyone. It is not the time nor place to argue what else might have been done. Rather we must ask ourselves what we can yet do.

A few interesting corollaries of the basic facts stand out and they bear study if we are at all to understand what we are undertaking to do. (1) We are again supporting a reactionary government without the cooperation of the governed. (Can we ask or expect Korean to fight brother Korean for a democracy he does not see?) (2) By now, judging by history, we can deduce the simple fact that we are not going to "sell" democracy anywhere by arms. (3) Far from simplifying the matter by armed effort in Korea, we are already becoming more and more involved in holding a Far Eastern military line against ideas which are only partly Communist and in great part made up of a rebellion against Western imperialism as well as of civil conflict.

In the light of what has already taken place, what can we who are only citizens do? I, for one, am not willing to accept the idea of a third world war as inevitable. Those words are forming a kind of slogan, and we, a people of slogans, accept them too easily.

Although I strongly believe that military force is always destructive and an admission of defeat, and although I firmly hold that the first and most urgent equipment of the United Nations is a mobile group of the world's best trained mediators to be instantly flown to any point of conflict, what has been done can perhaps still be used constructively. In spite of argument in our press as to the order in which events took place and the legality thereof, enough support from the Security Council and from other nations has come to warrant the possibility of making this joint action into the foundation for a United Nations police force. I think it can only grow out of an urgent need of this kind.

Our country in its present contradictory position, trying to uphold freedom while supporting reaction, partly because my neighbors and myself know so little about how other people think.

We have not reached the moral age of being able to put ourselves in the place of other nationals. We have not learned how to read history in terms of humanity rather than in terms of events. We really, perhaps, do not dare to ask ourselves what we would do if we were citizens of the South Korean area. Would we be willing to fight against our brother Koreans for any political group when the longing of our hearts was for the unity of our people?

It is we, the American people, who have to be the ones to say what history will record, for we are the ones who have physical power. The record, however, will not be an enviable one unless it shows, too, that we have a desire to understand comparable to or excelling our military strength.

GRACE S. YAUKEY.
Washington.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

We Must Mobilize

ONE FACT is now transparently clear. Before long, President Truman is going to ask Congress for something very like national mobilization, plus a great increase in military appropriations. So far as can be learned, the President has not as yet made the decision to take this step; but one can be certain he will do so, simply because he is a sensible and patriotic man.

As has been reported in this space, the need for a vastly intensified American defense effort has long been understood by most of Truman's ablest advisers, and particularly by Secretary of State Dean G. Acheson and W. Averell Harriman. Korea has now exposed our own shocking weaknesses. Korea has now placed the intentions of the Kremlin beyond any possibility of wishful misrepresentation. Thus Korea is becoming a great turning point.

Since the Korean attack, Acheson, Harriman and others of like mind, conspicuously including John Foster Dulles, have been earnestly urging the President not to delay the hard journey to Capitol Hill. If he follows their advice, he will go before the Congress. He will at last describe in realistic terms the appalling danger that now confronts the United States. And he will ask for special powers and a "first slice" of something like $5 billion additional funds, for the most urgent special defense outlays.

NO MORE THAN a "first slice" program can probably be presented at this time (perhaps necessitating a November special session), because of the present disarray of our military planning. The Joint Chiefs of Staff have never been able to agree upon a true requirements plan for American defense. The confusion of global western defense planning under the Atlantic Pact is almost indescribable. The mess is only now being tackled.

Thus it seems hardly possible at this time to do more than ask for money for the vital equipment, such as tactical aircraft, tanks, modern anti-tank weapons, and radar warning apparatus, which hardly exists in the American arsenals. The deficiencies in these items are so great and so glaring that no one can disagree as to the need for them. The same holds true for stepping up research and development work on new weapons, and for certain other obvious areas of investment. What is most clearly urgent must be started now, and the rest (barring a planning miracle) must be left till later.

As for the problem of mobilization, the formal act will probably be deferred, although many insist it should not be. Instead, the President will probably ask only for emergency authority of allocation and priority, to break the most urgent industrial bottlenecks. The television boom, for instance, cannot be permitted to halt radar manufacture, as it is now doing. On the economic side, the President's Council of Economic Advisers, headed by Leon Keyserling, has played a bold and useful role, advising Truman that the American economy can support whatever American security requires, without undue strain or confusion.

The decision to do what American security requires is being opposed, so far as can be learned, by only one high official among the men around Truman. Of the junta which sponsored the policy of "defense economy" two years ago, Keyserling's tremulous predecessor, Dr. Edwin Nourse, has left the Government. The Bureau of the Budget, Secretary of the Treasury John Snyder, even Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer, have all been reduced to silence by the grim spectacle of Korea.

BUT WHILE the criminal neglect of our defenses is being daily more glaringly exposed, the Secretary of Defense stands alone against launching an adequate defense effort. His office, which makes his stand so incredible, is also the main asset of Louis Johnson in this strange White House debate.

Johnson describes the heads of the services as "my joint chiefs." A policy of divide and rule has rather successfully encouraged Joint Chiefs' disagreement on long-range plans. Gen. Omar Bradley, in his impotent role as chairman of the Joint Chiefs, cannot do what Johnson ought to do. Hence the service heads tremble at the situation of America, yet the Secretary of Defense is still able to assert that the military leaders have not joined together to demand what Truman's civilian advisers are urging.

In the end, however, Johnson must be overborne. Every fact is against him. Almost the whole Administration is against him. The decency and common sense of Harry S. Truman are against him. In the end, unless the President wishes to preside, in the most literal sense, over the destruction of the United States, the big job that has been deferred so long must now be energetically begun. Not only Korea, but the Western World must be defended; else catastrophe is certain.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Gromyko's Accusation

LAST TUESDAY in a longish statement distributed by the Soviet news agency Tass Mr. Gromyko outlined the public arguments of his government on Korea. In writing it he must have hoped that those who read the beginning would not read the end, or that those who persevered to the end would have forgotten the beginning.

Lippmann

FOR IN the beginning he argues that the fighting started because the South Koreans attacked the North Koreans on June 26. At the end he argues that there is a civil war and that the North Koreans have a right to wage it without being interfered with. The two arguments eat each other up. If North Korea was, as he asserts, the victim of a provocative attack planned and instigated by America, then it was unnecessary to argue that the North "Koreans have the same right to organize according to their wishes their internal national affairs in the matter of the South and the North of Korea into one state as that right which belonged to and was used by the North Americans in the Sixties of the last century, when they unified the South and the North of America into one national state."

If Mr. Gromyko believed that the world would believe that Korea was the victim, he would not have had to argue that North Korea has a right to unify Korea by armed force. And if, on the other hand, he believed that the world would believe that this was a legitimate civil war, he would not have had to pretend that the North Koreans, who are invading South Korea, were the victims of a "provocative attack."

THE PROOF is conclusive, indeed rather embarrassingly conclusive, that it is pure fabrication to assert that on June 26 the United States instigated a "provocative attack . . . as a result of a plan prepared in advance." For on June 26, far from being provocative, far from making an attack, the South Korean army was so much asleep that it seems to have been knocked out of the war before it was able to pull itself together in order to fight a war. Mr. Gromyko does not even attempt to say where the "provocative attack" occurred. It never occurred. An army which is executing a provocative attack according to a plan prepared in advance will, whatever happens, not be surprised, as the South Korean obviously was, that the guns go off and that there is a fight.

ON WHAT evidence, then, does Mr. Gromyko base his grave accusation against the United States? On some statements made by South Korean leaders which, if they are correctly quoted, were foolish boasts about the prowess of their feeble little army, and then on the fact that Secretary Johnson and General Bradley were in Japan, and that Mr. Dulles was actually in Korea and at the thirty-eighth parallel, a week before the fighting started. The story which Mr. Gromyko offers the world is that Johnson, Bradley and Dulles, acting on a plan prepared in advance, went to the Far East to pull the trigger which set off a South Korean attack on North Korea.

The proof that this story cannot be true is that the Administration in Washington and the high command in the Far East were not only surprised and unready for the attack but were so little prepared for intervention in Korea that the whole campaign is being improvised.

THE PROOF of our innocence is therefore embarrassingly complete. Far from having planned the conquest of North Korea, as Mr. Gromyko charges, we do not seem to have made any plans, much less taken military preparations, to defend South Korea. When Johnson, Bradley and Dulles were with MacArthur they seem to have been briefed on almost everything except the possibility or the probability of a war in Korea. The surprise which the North Koreans achieved was not merely "tactical" in the sense that we did not know the exact time and the precise locality of the invasion. The surprise was strategical in that the commanders were not prepared for any American action in Korea. They were not watching Korea closely enough or thinking about Korea seriously enough to have on hand the kinds of weapons most suitable for dealing with the kind of army which was known to be standing on the thirty-eighth parallel.

THE ANALOGY with Pearl Harbor is disquietingly close in respect to the failure of the high command, largely because of its own preconceptions and preoccupations, to judge correctly the meaning of the intelligence available to it.

In 1941 surprise was achieved at Pearl Harbor because of a preconception that Japan would attack not the United States, which was strong, but the British, French and Dutch colonies, which were weak. And so the Japanese fleet which struck at Pearl Harbor was overlooked and was left unaccounted for.

On June 26 surprise was achieved in Korea because of a preoccupation with the Soviet threat to Japan and with the Chinese threat to Formosa. This caused us to overlook the North Korean army.

The analogy with Pearl Harbor may now usefully be carried further. It was not in the national interest then, as it is not now, to hold a congressional investigation. That can come later. But it was necessary then, and it is necessary now, that the President should take strong measures to replace those men who, in various key positions, have shown themselves to be not nearly alert and not nearly forehanded enough.

GRIN AND BEAR IT — By Lichty

Florida Primary Gifts Probed

gator" after Griffin got serious about looking into crime in South Florida.

Griffin thereupon made public the Johnston and Wolfson contributions. Neither was denied. Wolfson said yesterday that Griffin made the information public without his consent. He said he did not remember the exact figure but that "a large part" of the money was a personal loan to Warren. He said the loan has not yet been repaid.

At the time of the 1948 primary, according to Florida newspapers, there was a State law limiting political contributions to $5000 per person. The law later was repealed. Asked about this, Wolfson said he was unaware of any such law.

Wolfson explained he has been a friend and admirer of Warren's for "18 or 20 years." He added that he did not know of Johnston's contributions until Griffin disclosed it and that he has had no relationship with the dog track figure.

Wolfson said one of his business firms, an industrial supply company, has long done business with the State of Florida. But, he added, "it did larger amounts of business during the terms of previous governors than under Warren."

A good deal of information about Johnston was spread on the record of the Senate Crime Committee last week by Virgil Peterson, boss of the Chicago Crime Commission.

He said Johnston is presently listed as president of the Miami Beach Kennel Club, the Associated Outdoor Clubs of Tampa, the Jacksonville Kennel Club and the Orange Park Kennel Club, all Florida dog tracks.

In some of these ventures, as well as in the Chicago track, Johnston has or has had as an associate John Patton. Peterson said Patton "has long been associated with members of the Capone gang," that "many years ago he was known as the Boy Mayor of Burnham,' a suburb of Chicago, which was the center of vice, gambling and booze for the Capone syndicate."

Peterson listed other alleged associates of Johnston, calling many of them members of the Capone gang. The crime commission executive, a former FBI agent, earlier had testified that the modern-day Capone game is the boss of Chicago's underworld, with great influence elsewhere in the Nation as well. Many of its members, he said, have palatial Miami area homes and investments in Florida gambling and rackets and in legitimate businesses as well.

Two other Florida figures likely to be in the committee spotlight during the hearings in Miami on Thursday and Friday are the sheriffs of Dade and Broward Counties, in which are situated Miami and Fort Lauderdale, respectively.

Broward County Sheriff Walter R. Clark was reported to have been an "unsatisfactory witness" when he appeared before the committee at a closed session in Miami two months ago.

The other sheriff, James Sullivan of Dade County, was out of town on a fishing trip when the Senators were in Miami.

Visiting Methodist Reports Surge of Religion in Germany

"The attendance at churches in Germany is constantly increasing. It was the period of darkness [the Hitler era] that brought the people together," Dr. Frederick Wunderlich, president of the Methodist Seminary in Frankfurt, Germany, told the congregation of Calvary Methodist Church, 1429 Columbia rd., nw., yesterday.

The minister-writer, who is visiting this country at the invitation of the State Department and World Council of Churches, praised the new cooperative spirit shown by all religions in Germany.

He said that because so many churches were destroyed in World War II, Lutherans, Methodists, Catholics and other denominations are cooperating in sharing church facilities.

"People have come to realize that in 'the years of darkness' there was something lacking and now they are giving the 'Kingdom of God' first place," Dr. Wunderlich said.

The Rev. Dr. Orris G. Robinson, pastor of Calvary Methodist, led the service in prayer and meditation.

Army Sec. Needs A Parisian Indian

By Richard L. Coe

WITH THE ROCK ISLAND RAILROAD seized by the Army in present union-management difficulties, Secretary of the Army Pace may find a way out of his newly-added chores by paying some thought to the Metropolitan's current epic.

This, as though the Fates who handle such coincidences had done it on purpose, is called "Rock Island Trail.' It talks about the beginnings of the now troubled road and, needless to say, Love had a big hand.

What Secretary Pace, the Switchmen's Union and railroad Prexy Farrington should find is an Indian princess educated in Paris.

This princess, chicly embodied in Adrian Booth, was a Saux, not to be confused with a Sioux. Because when Construction Engineer Forrest Tucker and Banker Grant Withers decided to blaze progress from East to West, they had to wage war with a riverboat tycoon (Bruce Cabot) who'd enlisted a batch of renegade Sioux to ambush the first train. But to the aid of Tucker and Withers comes a friendly band of Indians, the Saux, whose chief's daughter loves Tucker. A shrewd, worldly gal like this, Indian of blood, haute monde of Parisian training, makes the most of her qualities, sicks her tribe on Tucker's enemies, ultimately loses her life.

Weep not, gentle reader, for hers is an Unrequited Love, and naturally only in the most exceptional movie would a Caucasian union with a Redskin be accepted ("The Broken Arrow," a fine picture, will soon show you that). Stalwart Tucker loves Banker Wither's daughter, Adela Mara, a union more socially acceptable, so Princess Aleeta must eat her heart out. Although in real life such may mean a lifelong frustration, Unrequited Love, in the movies, is mercifully handled: the lover always gives his life for the loved one.

Or, as Mr. Wilde observed concerning Miss Prism's three-volume novel: "The good ended happily and the bad unhappily. That is what fiction means."

Just where Secretary Pace will find the Parisian-educated Indian Princess who might work out some deal with Mr. Glover, president of the Switchmen's Union, must be left to him, although one is virtually certain that his security files, so filled with extraneous tidbits, can locate just so unlikely a trucolor babe.

THE COLLINGWOOD Theater pulled a weekend fast one by deciding to stick to "They Knew What They Wanted" for another week . . . For the first time since the new Mount Vernon Highway Theater's opening, rain played hob last week with several performances of the Sidney Howard drama . . . Lots of people, the Collingwood players feel, would like to see this one with Eugene Marlo and Fran Benton in the leads, so "Heaven Can Wait" will.

McLEAN'S Straw Hat Theater, in the old Virginia courthouse, pulled, on the other hand, a slow one, its announcement for this week's play evidently a closely guarded secret until long after Sunday paper's deadline . . . Tomorrow night the group will unveil its version of "Skylark," the comedy with which Sam Raphaelson luckily caught the interest of G. Lawrence . . . Frances Keiran and Gordon Sterne have the leads.

SCHOLARSHIPS under the Fulbright bill offering talented Americans theatrical training and study abroad will again be offered for the 1951-52 academic year . . . A B.A. or its equivalent in professional training is a fundamental requirement, so is a basic knowledge of the language of the country in which they wish to study . . . Further information for these stimulating awards from the Institute of International Education, 2 West 45th st., N. Y. 19.

SEAT SALE TODAY for Hopalong Cassidy and the Cole Brothers Circus, which opens Thursday afternoon to run through next Sunday matinee . . . Tickets will be on sale, starting this morning, at Bond's, the clothing shop, 1335 F st. . . . Hopalorg isn't the only feature of this second ranking of the circus tops by a long shot . . . Among many others in the aggregation is the great Hanneford Family; now it's Kay, Tom, Katherine and the two Georges, sr. and jr. . . . Their equestrian family goes back to the early 1800's in Ireland and the Hannefords are always grand.

"ROCK ISLAND TRAIL." Republic release, produced by Paul Malvern, directed by Joseph Kane, screenplay by James Edward Grant based on a novel by Frank J. Nevins. At the Metropolitan.

Postlude

Singer Arthur Davis Hindered By Acoustics at Art Gallery

By Paul Hume

Arthur Davis and Carol Klooster presented a song recital in the National Gallery of Art last night.

Davis has a resonant bass-baritone of smooth quality. It is a voice capable of many alluring moments, and often he achieved phrases of beauty in the quiet songs that dominated his program.

It is almost impossible in the gallery to determine whether or not a singer is pronouncing words distinctly. The acoustics are more of a problem to a singer than to any other musician. Davis seemed to make much of his words but they were often swallowed up in the place.

His program needed more lightness and banter. And it is always disappointing to note an American singer who gives no place to American songs on his program. Miss Klooster played accompaniments in the subdued manner of the singing. But with such gifts as the two possess, it was too bad we were not more stirred by them.

where the central cathedral and other large buildings were shattered by the violent quake, he said.

The quake, which shook the territory shortly before midnight last night, sent thousands of natives fleeing, terrified, into the countryside.

Many of the Indians were still too dazed tonight to return to their villages. About 20,000 persons live in the shaken area.

Meanwhile, reports reaching here from San Cristobal, Venezuela, said another or the same quake rocked that territory, killing at least 39 persons and injuring many others.

In Bogota the Federal Government immediately ordered Air Force planes laden with emergency supplies to aid the victims. It was not known whether the local hospital had collapsed or if medical supplies were on hand in Cucuta's disaster-stricken area.

Damage was estimated at more than five million dollars by the State Governor.

immediately who drove the Keesee auto. No charges were filed last night.

Twenty-year-old Elwood Hensley, 20, of Elkton, Va., was killed at 1 a. m. yesterday when his auto went out of control on a curve 3 miles east of Shenandoah, Va. Page County authorities said he died of a broken neck.

In another accident, Leo Adolph Decker, 47, of Baltimore, was killed, his wife, Ruth, critically injured, and an 11-year-old son seriously hurt. The accident occurred at 10:20 p. m. when Decker's car ran into a truck on Rt. 301, eight miles south of Marlboro, Maryland State police reported. A daughter, aged 7, escaped injury.

Injuries suffered Saturday morning proved fatal early yesterday to James Bumbray, 21, of Warrenton. He died in Arlington Hospital, apparently of head injuries, hospital attaches said.

Bumbray's father found him in an overturned car on Route 29, about a mile east of Warrenton. Police were investigating.

In the District, Police Pvt. James W. Corbin, 27, of Lorton, Va., suffered a neck injury about 11:15 a. m. yesterday when the scout car in which he was riding was rammed by a taxicab at 5th and M st. nw.

Police listed the cab driver as Bernice M. Hayes, 35, of 306 Hollywood st. ne. The scoutcar was driven by Pvt. Ernest M. Reed, 30, of 66 Seaton pl. nw.

Corbin was in satisfactory condition last night at Emergency Hospital. A Corporation Counsel's hearing was scheduled for July 14.

Mickey Harris Had to Go on Relief to Make Good

With Shirley Povich

PHILADELPHIA, JULY 9.—When the Nats are staggering and Manager Bucky Harris wants a relief pitcher, he picks up the phone in the dugout, gets a "hello" from the bull pen and says, "Send me Mr. Trouble."

Whereupon Mickey Harris grabs up his sweat jacket, crashes open the bull pen gate with a well-directed kick, and starts for the mound in a swagger-strut that almost shouts "Relax, men, I am here."

POVICH

And Harris is the happiest thing that has happened to the Nats this season. He has been in more than one third of their games. His record of three wins and three defeats is a libel. He's figured in 10 winning games, only three losses. The breakdown shows he has allowed an average of fewer than five hits per nine-inning game.

The tough guy role that Mickey has adopted is deliberate. Off the field, he's a devoted husband and doting father of two little boys. But when he walks into a ball game, he's a sneering, snarling, contemptuous meanie. Sure, he stole it all from the Yankees' Joe Page, he admits. An unabashed piece of plagiarism that is paying off. "That Page is making $35,000 a year making faces at the hitters and acting tough. I decided to muscle in on his racket."

THE NEWLY developed slider pitch he came up with this year has helped, Mickey says. "It's wonderful when you can make the batter hit your pitch, instead of giving him the one he wants."

The Nats think he's a card, too. He walked into a game the other day in the ninth inning with the bases full, first detouring past the Nats' bench. "Have a beer waiting for me in my locker, fellows, I'll get these bums out in a hurry," he said. And he did, one-two-three.

Mickey's big-shot actions don't necessarily mean he's big-headed. Last spring he was regaling the Nats with his story of his visit to the psycho ward of a service hospital in Boston where a friend, a doctor, had invited him to talk to the former GIs.

"I'm telling them some baseball stories, and some soldier in the back of the room is heckling me. He says 'Harris, you're a bum'. I didn't pay any attention and a little later he says 'Harris, you stink'. I just ignored him.

"After it's over, the doctor thanked me for going out there and apologized for the heckler. 'You've done some good though', he told me, 'Because that's the first sane thing that patient has said in the 18 months we've had him'."

MICKEY CAME to the Nats last summer along with his roommate, Sam Mele, one day before the June 15 trading deadline, in the deal that sent Walter Masterson to the Red Sox. They were both happy to get away from Joe McCarthy, they say.

"Every time a guy got on base against you, McCarthy acted as if it was going to cost the Red Sox the pennant," said Mickey. "He never said anything directly to you, but he made cracks that everybody on the bench could hear."

McCarthy never forgot that he used to manage the Yankees, Harris declared. "How about that day in Detroit when Mele, here, goes back to the right field fence and makes a great try for the ball but doesn't get it? Sam gets a big bump on the head and McCarthy on the bench is saying 'Henrich would have stuck it in his hip pocket'."

Mickey Harris is Maurice Charles Harris, but he was willing to forget that "Maurice" segment of his name years ago. "It sounded too much like a hair dresser," he explained.

He was 32 last January, 6-foot, 200 pounds, a left-hander, who had been in the Red Sox organization for 11 years with time out for four years of Army service, before he joined Washington. He gives the impression of being a flippant Irishman, but he's English-German and a New Yorker from Long Island and The Bronx.

HE WAS the star first baseman for Public School 109, an industrial high school in Jamaica, when he discovered that pitchers were more in demand and could make 5 or 10 bucks a game in the Queens-Nassau semipro league.

MICKEY HARRIS

Mickey was pitching semipro ball and spraying paraffin on milk containers for a dairy company when he asked Bill Terry to let him pitch some batting practice for the Giants in 1937. Terry let him try, and a few days later called him aside.

"They tell me you're taking off from work to come out here," said Terry. "Well, you ought to give the whole idea up. Go back to your job." The next thing Terry did was to take a swipe at the fleeing kid who had told Terry what he could do with the Giants.

Jack Egan, a Red Sox scout who had the New York territory, was the next man interested in Harris. He watched him pitch in the Queens-Nassau League, and was waiting for Mickey at the end of the game. Harris had been

Tigers Lose Two; Nats Split on Kuzava's 4-Hitter

Tribe Wins, 6-2, 5-2; Yanks Whip Bosox, 3-1

Champs Win Behind Lopat; Now Trail By Only 3 Games

New York, July 9 (AP).—The New York Yankees scored twice in the first inning on four consecutive singles today and went on to defeat the Boston Red Sox, 3-1.

The Yanks, in winning, pulled to within three games of the league-leading Detroit Tigers, who lost twice to Cleveland.

Eddie Lopat scattered nine Red Sox hits in outpitching Joe Dobson who surrendered only seven blows.

The Red Sox were sunk right off the bat as Phil Rizzuto, Gene Woodling, Yogi Berra and Joe DiMaggio opened the Yank half of the first with singles before Dobson retired a batter.

After the first Dobson pitched well, allowing only three more hits until he was lifted for pinch-hitter Billy Goodman in the eighth.

Joe DiMaggio pulled a leg muscle after batting in the first and retired from the game.

Lemon Takes 12th, Beating Houtteman; Wynn Victor in 2d

Detroit, July 9 (AP).—Tthe Cleveland Indians jolted the American League leading Detroit Tigers with a double setback today winning the first game 6-2 for Bob Lemon's .twelfth victory and the nightcap 5-2 on Early Wynn's fine pitching relief.

The two losses cut their lead to three games over second-place New York and four and one-half over third-place Cleveland.

Art Houtteman was also seeking his twelfth victory in the opener but the young Detroit righthander was driven to an early shower.

Wynn, who took over after Mike Garcia was lifted for a pinchhitter in the second game, held the Tigers hitless in a nifty five-inning relief performance to notch his ninth win as against four losses.

The junior singles finals between Tim Coss and Tom Bradford were postponed until later in the week because of Bradford's sprained ankle.

Lollar's Homer Gives Browns 4-2 Victory

St. Louis, July 9 (AP).—A home run and a double by Sherman Lollar were just what the St. Louis Browns need to take a to 2 decision from the Chicago White Sox today. Lollar broke up a 2-2 tie in the fifth with a bases-empty circuit blow. Ned Garver limited the Sox to six hits.

Lollar's double in the seventh also resulted in a run when he took third on Eddie Robinson's error and scored on a long fly by Roy Sievers.

Jethroe Steals 3 Bases to Give Braves 3-2 Win

Boston, July 9 (AP).—Sam Jethroe stole three bases today and his final theft enabled the Boston Braves to make a three-game sweep over the New York Giants with a 13-inning 3-2 win.

Jethroe ran his season's stolen base total to 24 after opening the last half of the 13th inning with a double to left-center. When Earl Torgeson was passed, Sam stole third, injuring his left instep while so doing, and then limped home as Sid Gordon hit into a force play.

Vern Bickford racked up his ninth win and fourth in a row, limiting the Giants to eight hits and only three walks over the entire distance.

The Braves, now only two games out of first place, scored twice against Jack Kramer in the first inning on Torgeson's 11th homer with Roy Hartsfield aboard.

Monte Irvin's fifth homer of the season, which came after Eddie Stanky had singled in the eighth, deadlocked matters.

Chicago, July 9 (AP).—The Cincinnati Reds captured both ends of a doubleheader with the Chicago Cubs today, 6 to 0 and 6 to 5, before 27,580 fans. It gave the Reds a sweep of the four-game series.

Ken Raffensberger scattered six hits to hurl the Reds to victory in the opener. It was the veteran lefty's seventh win and the third straight for the Reds in the series.

4 Records Made in Mile Trials

By Happy Walker

Abingdon, Md., July 9.—Seven world's records toppled today at the Bush River Regatta in the most sensational day of motor boat racing seen on the East Coast since before the war.

Although the records must be approved by the Racing Commission of the American Powerboat Association, there seemed little doubt that approval would be granted as a matter of routine because the course was approved for records before the races.

Four of the marks were set in the one mile trials early in the day. In the 48 C. I. Runabout class, Ruby Scull, Ventnor, N. J., driving the Mickey Mouse, was clocked at 49.055 m. p. h. The old record for the event is 44.898.

Lawyer Gets Record

E. D. Hedges, Atlantic City attorney, driving the Baby Eagle, set a record of 58.207 m.p.h. for the B racing runabouts. Ed Thompson, of Edgemere, Maryland, in the T. M. Special, negotiated the mile in the C racing runabout class in 62.398 m.p.h. The old record was 61.229.

The other world record set in the mile trials was in the E service Runabout class by William Jackson, Lancaster Pa., in the Wood 'n Bill at 50.385 m.p.h. The old record was 48.926 m.p.h.

In five-mile competitive races Washington's Aubrey and Joe Thacker set a world record in their D. Service runabout, the Jezebel Eight. Their time was 47.071 m.p.h. The former record was 45.725.

Jackson Wins Again

William Jackson, of Lancaster, took his second world mark of the day, in the E service runabout class with the Wood 'n Bill in five-mile competition with a speed of 47.418 m. p. h.

The final record breaking event of the day was in the 48 cubic inch runabout class, when Fulton Moore, of Cambridge, racing in Taboo, did the distance in 43.966 m. p. h., beating the former mark of 42.128.

Howard Scott Dies After Racing His Boat

Abingdon, Md., July 9.—Howard W. Scott, 51, of Alexandria, Va., one of the area's best known speed boat racers, died shortly after racing his hydroplane in today's Bush River Regatta here.

Scott was stricken by a heart attack in the clubhouse after the race. He died en route to Harvard Hospital, Havre de Grace. His wife, Mrs. Mabel Scott, was with him. His other survivor is a son, Howard jr., of Cleveland.

Scott was technical adviser for the Eastman Kodak Co., of Washington. The Scotts reside at 18 Wilton rd., Alexandria.

BITTER PILL FOR FOES OF PHILS—This is Jim Konstanty, 33-year-old prize relief pitcher for the league-leading Philadelphia Phillies. Konstanty has been in 36 games already this season and threatens to break Ace Adams' mark of 60 appearances made with the New York Giants several years ago. Konstanty took part in all three games of the Phillies-Dodgers series, concluded yesterday. He's won seven and lost three and saved countless other games for the Whiz Kids

Bill Bennings

Dear folks:

The racing here will go on through Saturday. However, the Monday program is the last for the jockey club. The other five days are allotted to the Charles Town horse show. But the show is the same—officials, jockeys, horses, etc. This track is using jeeps instead of tractors to pull grade equipment, finding the sturdy little autos don't cut up the running surface. Eddie O'Hara, general manager of Bowie and Marlboro, was a visitor Saturday. He was mutuel manager at Hagerstown and Cumberland. Marlboro's regular meeting opens September 12. However, the track will stage a big horse show on July 22 and 23.

Heyer, Frank Gain Belle Haven Final

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

Belle Haven Country Club Champion Frank Heyer defeated Frank Woolley 1 up in 20 holes and Eddie Frank won by an identical score from Joe Daniels in the semifinal matches of the Belle Haven Bowl Tournament yesterday.

Heyer was 2 up at the end of 12 holes, but Woolley, a quarter-finalist in the Virginia State Championships last week, won 13 and 14. They halved 15, 16 and 17 with pars, but Heyer's par on the final hole was good for the match when Woolley's putt rimmed the cup and flipped out.

Frank won his match with Daniels on the eighteenth with a par after Daniels missed a putt. In the two-man team matches against par, Robert Collier and H. Huston were first with 29, 34—63, seven below par. Eddie Frank and Joe Daniels, 6 up with 32, 32—64, were second.

INDIAN SPRING: Ed Griesmer, brother of Pro Harry Griesmer of Bethesda, won the Senior Championship with 77—13—64. He went out in 41 but returned in 36, 2 over par for the nine holes. Harold Schattman took low net in the tournament with 83—20—63.

ARMY NAVY: Col. G. H. Kreiger won the 18-hole full handicap sweepstakes with 80—11—69. Lieut. Col. D. W. Reed, 82—12—70, was second, and Col. T. W. Parker, 78—7—71, was third.

ROCK CREEK: Eleanor Jester and Del Todd won the mixed Scotch foursome with 76—8—68. Elizabeth Saunders and Al Jones won a playoff for second from Pat Nicholson and Tex Carpenter. Both had 76—7—69s.

EAST POTOMAC: Medalist William Reid eliminated Sam Carter 3 and 2 and Ted King ousted George Graham by the same score in the semifinals of the J. R. Tomlin Trophy. Results in other flights were:

SECOND FLIGHT

Ellis Barron won the Class B with 75—7—64 and Ralph Goldsmith and Nat Lubar tied for second with net 67s. In the Class C division, Sam Block's 82—18—64 was low, followed by Ferd Sacknoff's 85—19—65. Frank Luchs took Class D with 87—23—64. Jerry Antel with a net 65 was second.

MANOR: In the best ball foursome three-fourths handicap tournament E. J. Crill, Ken McKay, B. P. Shultz and J. S. Murray, 71—15—56, and G. G. Roviras, Dr. W. G. Puryear, F. C. Sellnow, and S. M. King, 70—14—56, were tied.

BETHESDA: Arthur Rabuck defeated George Dillon 5 and 4 in the semifinals of the senior tournament and George Fuller won the other semifinals match 3 and 2 from Fred Miller.

George Winkler shot a gross par 70, which with his four handicap, gave him a net 66, good for first place in the 18-hole sweepstakes. Winkler went out in two-below-par 33, but bogied the 16th and 18th holes coming in. Dick Reasoner, 77—9—68, and Sherman Burt, 82—14—68, tied for second.

PRINCE GEORGES: Bob Kambries won the Kicker's Tournament with 87—27—60. Jimmy Baker was second with 79—18—61 and E. J. Still and John Klossner tied for third with net 62s. Cissel-Saxon Tops Hyattsville, 9-3

Cissel-Saxon of Silver Spring took an early lead and went on to defeat Hyattsville, 9 to 3, in the Junior Legion League at Brown Field yesterday.

Four Other Seeded Aces In 3d Round

Five seeded players advanced to the third round in the Middle Atlantic Sectional tennis championships yesterday at the Kenwood Golf and Country Club. First-seeded Earl Cochell went three sets with Washington's John Curtiss before winning, 6—1, 1—6, 6-1.

Cochell, clowning throughout his match, let up considerably in the second set which went to the 40-year-old Curtiss.

His baseline corner shots and sideline passing shots fell inches inside the calklines time and again as he broke a 1—1 tie and went ahead 5—1.

Cochell purposely threw the final game of the set, enabling him to start the deciding set as server.

The other four seeded players won straight-set matches. Fourth-seeded Hugh Stewart, Cochell's University of Southern California teammate, defeated another District veteran, 42-year-old Allan McCarroll, 6—1, 6—1.

Third-seeded Ricardo Balbiers, champion of Chile, won over Alphonso Smith of the host Kenwood Club, 6—4, 6—0; fifth-ranking Arnold Saul downed Mark Haller, 6—1, 6—2, and eighth-seeded Gil Shea won, 6—1, 6—0, over Frank Arrington.

Bolling Splits Pair

Bolling Field split a doubleheader with Gallagher & Huguely yesterday, winning the second game, 8-3, after losing the opener, 10-3.

Nordholm, D. C. Skipper, Wins Title

Annapolis, Md., July 9 (AP).—Two little thistles, tillered by Washington and Anne Arundel County skippers, finished in a dead heat as 184 sailboats wound up the Annapolis Yacht Club's thirteenth annual regatta today.

After four and one-half miles of sailing over a triangular course, on the mouth of the Severn River, Eric Nordholm's Fu Manchu and W. W. Heintz's Highlander skidded across so close together the judges couldn't make a decision.

They called the race a stalemate, but it was enough to give Nordholm the points to win the two-day series and the Central Atlantic Thistle Championship.

Nordholm, of Washington, sailed under a Potomac River Sailing Association burgee. Heintz competed for the West River Sailing Club.

Harris Goes on Relief And Makes Good

licked by a home run with the bases full.

Mickey didn't know who Egan was, and when the scout said "That was a dumb pitch, why didn't you throw him your good fast ball," Harris reacted quite normally for him. "Why don't you go jump in the lake," he told Egan, "and mind your own business."

Nevertheless Egan offered him a contract of $100 a month to sign with the Red Sox farm system plus a bonus of $100 for signing. "I held out," relates Mickey, "For 50 bucks more and signed."

The Red Sox sent him to Clarksville, Miss., in the Cotton States League, in 1938 after their Little Rock club turned him down. He was too wild. But he got a morale lift from General Manager Bill Evans who watched him walk the first six men he faced and then told him, "I liked one thing about you, kid. You were throwing just as hard to the sixth man as the first one. You weren't letting up to get the ball over the plate."

At Scranton in 1940, Mickey was hot stuff, winning 17, losing only four and missing out by only two votes in the choice for the league's most valuable player. The Red Sox called him up for a spell in midseason, but in 1942 he was Corpl. Maurice Harris with the Ground Forces in the Canal Zone.

Mickey made news during the war but not as a combat hero. Pitching in the Army's Canal Zone league, he turned in the perfect game—no hits, no runs, no batter reaches first. He needed only 69 pitches. He struck the last guy out on three strikes.

He went back to the Red Sox after the war and helped Joe Cronin to win the 1946 pennant with 17 wins against nine defeats. He was picked for the American League's All-Star team. He started two games against the Cardinals in the 1946 World Series, lost them both to Harry Brecheen, 3-0, and 3-1.

Bucky Harris was the first manager to think of Mickey in terms of a relief pitcher. He asked Mickey to step down as a starter and "do us more good by saving games." There was a pointed reference to the fact that Joe Page had demonstrated that a good relief pitcher could be the highest-paid man on the staff.

"Y' know," grinned Mickey, "that interested me."

Kuzava Wins On 4-Hitter

hit off Kuzava until the fifth when Hitchcock opened up with a single. Suder forced him and Yost then started a double play on Wahl's grounder.

Astroth opened the sixth with a single, but Grasso wiped him out at second on Kellner's attempted sacrifice, and it wound up as a double play. In the seventh Valo opened up with a single and was sacrificed along but the A's couldn't score.

Suddenly in the ninth the A's threatened to ruin Kuzava's shutout, even beat him. He had two out when he issued his third pass of the game to Valo, and Lehner followed with a single to center. But he got rid of Sam Chapman on a fly to left and walked off the field with the Nats' first shutout win in a month.

Hudson's wildness cost him the first game. He struck out the first man he faced and then couldn't get any of the next six men out in the first inning. Moses rapped him for a single, and he forced home a run with three straight passes.

Former Nat Hitchcock then singled two more home with a blow to short center and the A's had a 3-0 lead for Fowler.

Suddenly in the third, the Nats got those runs back and even more, to take a 4-3 lead. Stewart singled off Fain's glove, Noren dropped a double into left center, Vernon got 'em both home with a single through the box and then Mele connected for his seventh homer of the year—a blast against the facing of the upper deck in left.

Hudson had one out when Sam Chapman wiped out his 4-3 lead in the fifth. He did it with an inside-the-park homer that caromed off the wall into deepest centerfield, after Valo had singled.

Fowler was staggering in the seventh and eighth but the Nats couldn't score. Noren popped up to leave two on in the seventh, and in the eighth Michaels grounded into a double play after Vernon's single put the tying run on.

Hudson inspired the A's big run in the eighth by passing Fain with none on. As Hitchcock prepared to bunt, Hudson and Vernon fouled each other up. Vernon raced in and Hudson started a pickoff play on Fain with the bag uncovered. He held up his throw and it was a balk. Hitchcock singled to center to get Fain home with the run that upped the A's lead to 6-4.

The Nats quickly put the two tying runs on in the ninth on a walk to Dente and Evans' single to right against Fowler with none out. That's when Brissie moved in, filled the bases with a pass to Ortiz, and then got the ... three out with only one run scoring.

The Federal Diary by Jerry Kluttz

Senate committee rejected both by overwhelming votes.

The annual-leave rider as approved by the Senate committee wouldn't force employes to forfeit leave already accumulated, as some seem to believe. It would merely compel them to take leave earned during this calendar year of 1950 by June 30, 1951, or else lose it. The rider wouldn't affect leave accumulated in prior years. It would cover all Federal workers with the exception of those in State's Foreign Service. In addition, it might be interpreted as covering officers in the armed forces.

Other Actions Taken

These are among other actions taken by the Senate committee:

Approved the House riders to give the Secretaries of Commerce and State the authority to fire any of their employes summarily on security grounds, and it specified that the Commerce Secretary was to be given this power over Maritime agency employes.

Approved a provision to bar retired Army officers from becoming purchasing agents and private contact representatives with the department for at least two years afer leaving active military service.

Voted a $15,000 salary to the Labor solicitor; a $17,500 salary (from $15,000) to Jack Peurifoy, Deputy Undersecretary of State, and a pay boost from $16,000 to $20,000 for FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover.

Approved a million-dollar budget boost to pay the salaries of State employes, a move that would prevent the firing of several hundred employes if it stands.

Cut the Census Bureau a million dollars below the House bill, which would slow down hiring in that agency; Boosted Civil Aeronautics Administration budget by $2,775,000 over the amount voted by the House. The agency would be able to retain most of its present staff if the Senate figure is approved. Otherwise, CAA would be in for a sizable layoff.

RFC Given Boost

RFC was given a $700,000 budget boost over the House figure; .

Among the increases over the House for Agriculture are: Bureau of Agricultural Economics, $299,000; Office of Experiment Stations, $5,025,000; Bureau of Animal Industry, $119,000; Bureau of Dairy Industry, $135,000; Bureau of Agricultural and Industrial Chemistry, $750,000; Bureau of Plant Industry, $312,500; Bureau of Entomology, $2,089,500; Forest Service, $5,253,000; Soil Conservation, $275,175; Production and Marketing, $4,387,000; REA, $600,000; Farmers Home, $1,300,000, and Extension Service, $118,498.

The Housing and Home Finance Agency was given a $5,200,000 boost over the House budget; Interstate Commerce was given $147,600 additional; the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, $3,335,000 more, and these other increases were added among others:

Civil Service, $500,000; Displaced Persons, $8,544,900; Federal Power, $75,000; Federal Trade, $50,000; General Service, $6,225,000; SEC, $200,000; Smithsonian, $225,510; Tariff, $50,000; Maritime, $4,679,910, and Veterans Administration, $11,773,205.

Some Job Increases

These and most other budget boosts recommended by the Senate committee would merely restore part or all of the cuts voted by the House. In very few instances would the Senate figures result in increased employment.

The General Accounting Office was given an additional cut of $1,810,500 over its House budget. Its officials agreed to the slash, which will knock out additional jobs there.

The Senate committee recommended these amounts for the various Interior Department agencies, with the change up or down in parenthesis:

Happy Children, Pet Reunited; Dognaping Suspect Arrested

By Tom Keller—The Washington Post

UNDERSTANDING TRIO—Eddie and Mary Runnels, 6 and 3, respectively, of 107 South Patrick st., Alexandria, Va., are overjoyed to have their dog, Michael, back.

There was a boisterous reunion yesterday morning between two happy kids and a happy dog in the Alexandria home of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Runnels, jr., 107 S. Patrick st.

Michael was back—that's all that Eddie Runnels, 6, and his 3-year-old sister, Mary Elizabeth, cared about, after two days of longing for their playmate, whom neighbors saw being dragged into an auto near their home on Thursday.

But, acting on a warrant sworn out by Mrs. Runnels, Alexandria police yesterday charged Emmet Mitchell, an ironworker of the Woodley Hills trailer camp, in Groveton, with grand larceny of the pet dog, a mixture of collie and shepherd.

Mitchell, who was released on $1000 bond, is scheduled to appear in Alexandria Police Court at 10 a. m. today.

Runnels, an operating engineer, was out running down some possible clues to the whereabouts of the family pet Friday night when Mrs. Runnels received a telephone tip from an unidentified woman who had read newspaper stories about Michael's being dognaped. She was sure that Michael was at the Woodley Hills trailer camp.

Taking Mary Elizabeth and a woman neighbor with her, Mrs. Runnels went by taxi to the camp, picking up a Fairfax County policemen on the way. They found Michael in a yard near Mitchell's trailer.

"There's my Michael! Michael, you're coming home with me!" shouted Mary Elizabeth as dog and child "devoured each other with kisses," as Mrs. Runnels described it.

Though Mitchell claimed the dog as one he had lost three months ago, according to Mrs. Runnels, Michael went back to Alexandria with them and another joyful scene took place when they woke up Eddie.

"Well, where've you been?" shouted Eddie to Michael, trying to be manly about the whole thing. It was then nearly 1 a. m., and it was two hours before Mr. and Mrs. Runnels could get the children to bed. Yesterday, Eddie ate well for the first time since Michael disappeared. Mary Elizabeth was too excited to eat.

Milk Laws Hearing Set Here Today

D. C. Commissioners To Hear Arguments On Dairy Methods Of Sterilization

A public hearing on the District's 25-year-old milk laws is scheduled for today at 10 a. m. in the board room of the District Building, 14th and D sts. nw.

The District Commissioners will hear arguments pro and con on whether chemical sterilization of dairy farm equipment should be permitted. Present regulations requiring use of steam sterilization in preparing milk for sale in the District.

Behind this argument lies the issue of the continued position of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association, which now furnishes 85 percent of the Washington milk.

Proponents of chemical sterilization contend the association's virtual monopoly is protected by the steam sterilization requirement and that lifting of this would permit safe but cheaper sterilization and keep the monopoly from becoming air-tight.

The association, a cooperative of 1700 farmers, declares that steam sterilization is the only safe method for handling dairy equipment.

In the background is the matter of price. The association cites figures showing the average District price for delivered milk was 1/3 of a cent a quart less than the average for 56 cities in 1949. On the other hand, Representative A. L. Miller (R., Neb.) listed figures showing that Washington's milk prices were "consistently among the country's highest."

Many local organizations and individuals have asked for time to testify before the commissioners on the milk row, including Congressman Miller and Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) who opposes any change.

Police Seize Md. Fugitive In Tunnel At Gallinger

Youth Had Fled Anne Arundel Jail; Spent 11 Hours Under Ground Here

A young escapee from the Anne Arundel County Jail at Annapolis, Md., was captured by Metropolitan Police yesterday morning in the underground tunnel system that connects the buildings on the grounds of Gallinger Hospital.

Police said the fugitive, 18-year-old Charles B. Rector of Coco, Fla., had spent at least 11 hours in the tunnels.

He escaped Friday afternoon while working with other prisoners on an Anne Arundel County garage at the outskirts of Annapolis. Authorities said he was serving a 30-day term for the theft of a watch. He was arrested on petty larceny charge early last week.

A group of nurses first spotted "a man in the tunnel" shortly after midnight Saturday. They were frightened by his appearance and ran, but they failed to notify police since—they said later—the underground system can be used by anybody.

But "the man in the tunnel" was spotted again—about 11 a. m.—by an unidentified hospital attendant.

He told police he saw a man scramble up a set of steampipes, then disappear into a partitioned section of the tunnel roof that in effect serves as a catwalk.

Pvts. Robert E. Krahling and Richard P. King investigated. But they found they were hampered by lack of light.

The lights, plus a ladder, were brought by police Pvts. Edward D. Merward and Lee Scripture. All are assigned to the Fifth Precinct station.

While one policeman climbed into the catwalk with a portable searchlight, the others waited below.

Flushed out, the policemen reported, "the man in the tunnel" tried to make for another section of the catwalk, but failed.

Police said he literally fell into their arms.

Rector was charged with being a fugitive from justice and is being held at the Central Cell Block for a Municipal Court hearing.

Police said Rector had lived in Washington until about three years ago.

D. C. Man Dies Of Head Injury After Tumble

Victim First Found Lying at Foot of Stairs After Attending Party

A fall down a short flight of stairs early Saturday proved fatal yesterday morning to William Irvin Weaver, 42, of 1005 L st. nw., District Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald reported.

Dr. MacDonald said death was due to a compressed skull fracture. He issued a certificate of accidental death.

Weaver, according to homicide detectives, had not complained of anything more serious than a headache.

His wife, Mrs. Marianne Weaver, found him dead in bed about 7 a. m. yesterday.

Homicide detectives said the Weavers were attending a party in their apartment house Friday night. After leaving the party, Weaver sat on the front steps of the apartment house.

Another resident, Richard Halden, 19, told police he later found Weaver lying at the foot of the seven stone steps. Holden helped Weaver, who complained that his head hurt, to his apartment, police said.

Mrs. Weaver told homicide officers her husband took several aspirins before going to sleep Saturday night.

Syphilis Search

Blood Test Precedent Set in D. C.

Washington's current door-to-door case-finding quest for syphilis, unique in itself, is setting another precedent—blooddrop testing for the disease.

The canvassers, medical students from Howard University, are using the FPM (Filter Paper Miscroscopic) detection test.

In the FPM tests, a drop of blood pinprick drop of blood for laboratory analysis. This represents about 1/75th of the quantity normally extracted from a vein in other tests for syphilis.

The FPM test for syphilis uses a is taken from the finger in the same way as for a blood count. It is placed on a piece of narrow, white filter paper which absorbs the blood. The paper is then sent to the United States Laboratories, at Durham, N. C., for testing.

Dr. Ralph A. Hogan of the U. S. Public Health Service said the test is particularly valuable because the blood serum doesn't have to be separated from the blood and refrigerated.

"It is fairly convenient, painless and is as accurate as other blood tests," he declared.

The Washington survey, begun early this month, is a joint project of the District Health Department's Bureau of Venereal Disease and the Public Health Service. Before its completion in September, up to 250,000 residents may have been tested, officials said.

Knife-Waving Suspect Shot Fleeing Police

Assault Charges Filed Against Man Trapped After Auto Chase

Wounded in the right leg after a chase Saturday night, Francis A. Briscoe, 32, of 1356 Kenyon st. nw., was booked yesterday on two charges of assault with a dangerous weapon.

Police said the charges involve an attempt to run down one officer with an automobile and flourishing a knife at a second.

A passenger in the car escaped, police said.

Treated at Garfield Hospital, Briscoe was transferred to Gallinger Hospital, where his condition last night was reported as good.

Pvt. Leo Lyons of the Tenth Precinct said he saw a car without lights back out of a gas station at 14th and Kenyon sts. nw., narrowly missing two pedestrians.

The policeman said he called to the driver to stop. Instead, the car swerved toward him.

Lyons responded by tossing his nightstick at the car.

Patrol Wagon 10 was passing just then and Lyons yelled to the police to follow the auto.

The chase ended at 13th and Kenyon sts., where the two men in the auto ran into an alley.

Pvt. James T. Curtis followed. He said he found a man, whom he later identified as Briscoe, hiding behind a porch.

The suspect, Curtis said, waved a knife at him and started to run.

Curtis said he fired once, wounding Briscoe.

A Municipal Court hearing may be held today, depending on Briscoe's condition.

Miss Bissell said she was walking near her home when the two youths attacked her. They took her pocketbook containing $4.30, keys and a baby-sitter's "logbook," she reported.

Police broadcast a lookout for two Negroes about 18 years old, 5-feet-10-inches tall; one wearing a light blue shirt, the other a brown shirt and no hat.

In a second street assault case, Marion Fritz, 27, of 717 1st st. nw., told police two men knocked him down—apparently without reason—as he walked in front of his home about 12:30 a. m. After striking him, he said, the pair continued on their way.

He was admitted to Casualty Hospital for cuts of the right cheek and observation of head injuries. His condition was listed as good. Police broadcast a lookout for the two men.

Chapman, whose department has jurisdiction over Ohio dr. through its National Capital Parks service, paid tribute to the part that Ohioans have played in the development of Washington.

On behalf of President Truman, chairman of the Sesquicentennial Commission, Chapman presented to Lausche a scroll commemorating yesterday as "Ohio State Honor Day."

Dr. Nixon, professor of Christian theology and ethics at the Colgate-Rochester Divinity School spoke before a vesper service audience opening the Seventeenth Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia.

Over the long span of the centuries no discovery has been of greater value to mankind."

Spiritual aspects of the mid-century challenge to the United States were considered at tonight's vesper service.

Forecast for Fall . . .

Fall coat collars will stand up to the wind . . .

Necklines will plunge lower, but more modestly . . .

The side-to-side neckline will make glamour news . . .

New York, July 9.—Fashion editors from all over the United States and Canada were converging on Manhattan today for a week's peep at the styles which they and their readers will be wearing come fall.

Showings by the major dress manufacturers will begin tomorrow, but advance fashion predictions were already being circulated here today. The forecasts indicated that American women will be encouraged to remain feminine and natural by the stylists. Boyish fashions, copied from the flapper styles of the 20's, have been abandonned by designers who tried them out in vain last season.

No drastic style innovations were foreseen this year, but many new details will be introduced to bring the 1950 wardrobe up to date. Interest will focus on the neckline, and low-cut gowns will continue in favor. Big colars, and wide scooped shawl effects, will be popular with top-flight designers.

Skirts will hover at about mid-calf, the length apparently favored by most American women. Short evening dresses will be shown again, but the bouffant 'robe de style' will also be stressed.

D. C. "Lady Bountifuls" Make Career Out of Being Neighborly

By Sonia Stein

IT'S NOT every job that permits you to play Lady Bountiful. But approximately 30 women in the Washington area spend their working day distributing gifts and good advice. These lucky ladies, hostesses for the Welcome Wagon, have made a career out of being neighborly.

The Welcome Wagon is an international organization which provides business firms with a personalized public relations program. Hostesses for the wagon present newcomers to the city with a small gift plus a gift certificate from each of their business sponsors.

With this usually goes a deluge of useful information on transportation facilities, local traffic regulations, baby sitters, school and church facilities, playground programs. Hostesses also deliver letters of welcome from city officials and the Board of Trade, and an invitation to join the Newcomers Club which Welcome Wagon organizes but does not run.

Mrs. Mary D. Johnson, an attractive, well-groomed woman with grown children, is Washington's oldest (in point of service) Welcome Wagon hostess. She says it's not uncommon for housewives on whom she calls to regard her with suspicion at first. Gradually they warm to the project as they realize that everything is free and that there is nothing to buy. "They all end up by saying, 'It's just like Christmas.'" Mrs. Johnson explains.

In Washington, language sometimes creates a welcome problem. On one call, a diplomat's wife who spoke no English kept saying, "Nein, nein" and putting the proffered gifts back in the basket. Finally she thought she'd solved the mystery, went to her kitchen and brought out a jar of jelly and a box of crackers which she tried to add to the basket on the hostess' arm. A subsequent visit when her husband was home straightened everything out.

Found an Interpreter

MRS. JOHNSON later found a newcomer on her "beat" who speaks eight languages and has used her as an interpreter on linguistically difficult calls ever since.

There are more hazards than language on these missions. "All hostesses spend their first few days getting lost," claims Mrs. Johnson. After that their troubles vary. One hostess who had walked through the mud to get to a newcomer's door, considerately left her messy shoes on the porch and made the call in her stocking feet. When she was ready to leave, the shoes were gone, leaving nary a footprint behind them.

Children, the little darlings, can also be a hazard as they scream for attention and pull the presents out of the basket. One tot crawled into the hostess' basket and declined to crawl out. One hostess lost the brim of her hat to an enthusiastic little newcomer. She now carries a pocketful of balloons to help ease the situation.

Give Extra Services

CHOSEN for their interest in people as well as sound business sense, the hostesses usually give services above and beyond the call of duty. A Welcome Wagon hostess may find herself giving transportation to a child who needs hospital treatment, playing bridge with a lonely couple, or helping a new father line up diaper service and milk delivery. They even lend their homes for weddings.

The items carried in the welcome basket may also present a problem. Florists and dairies who want bouquets and milk to go out fresh on each call make it tough in hot weather. But most of the bulky gifts are offered by card.

As a career, Mrs. Johnson, and Mrs. Ruth Cotting who is supervisor of the Washington area, think theirs offers wonderful opportunities. Age, for example, is no barrier since mature women make the best hostesses. And a hostess can in effect raise her own salary by lining up additional sponsors.

Although prospective hostesses must pay their own expenses for 11 days in New York while they are training, and then may work for six or eight months without a penny earned before they line up a group of businessmen sponsors in their own area, they can eventually make up to $125 a week.

Selling herself and her system to the sponsors is where business acumen is needed by the hostess. Civic-pride and social grace is only half the job requirement.

Hard Work Too

PREVIOUS business training is not a requirement, however. Mrs. Johnson hadn't worked since she was married. Mrs. Cotting, in need of reliable hostesses when she was getting the service started here in 1947, asked Mrs. Johnson if she could suggest someone who'd be suitable. Finally Mrs. Johnson asked timidly if she might do herself. She is now assistant supervisor in charge of the Virginia area.

"Some of our girls give up the job because it turns out to be work instead of just playing Santa Claus," Mrs. Johnson says, "But many of them get release from their own problems by helping others. When we leave a house saying 'Feel free to call on us for any aid we can give you' we really mean it. It's fun to help!"

By Tom Keller—The Washington Post

THE Welcome Wagon organization, founded over 20 years ago, was inspired by covered wagons that used to bring food and water to wagon trains making their parched way across the prairies. The covered wagon is still the emblem, but the hostesses travel by sleek car, and carry a variety of gifts. Mrs. Ruth Cotting (left) supervisor of the Washington area, and Mrs. Mary Johnson spend their days welcoming newcomers with gifts from local merchants and information about the area. More than 15,000 calls a year are made in the Metropolitan area

Argentina's National Fete Is Celebrated

By Elizabeth Maguire

ARGENTINA'S national holiday was celebrated here yesterday at a reception held by the Ambassador, Jeronimo Remorino. Guests, including diplomats, officials and members of the Argentine colony, were received at the embassy between 6 and 8 o'clock.

Latin American ladies for the most part wore black lace frocks, in contrast to the Washington socialites who wore a variety of prints and colored silks. Our neighbors from the south seemed to have discovered that all black or black and white has unbeatable chic for warm weather.

The Ambassador took the occasion to say hello or 'farewell' as the case might be. He has been back just about three weeks from a visit to the Argentine, and he is leaving soon for Germany, where he will negotiate trade agreements for his country.

The Korean Ambassador, Dr. John Myun Chang, was a guest at the party, the first he has attended since the crisis. Other chiefs of mission were the Belgian Ambassador, Baron Silvercruys, the Ambassador of Venezuela, Don Jose Rafael Pocaterra; the Ambassador of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Thomen, and the Ambassador of Yugoslavia, Vladimir Popovic.

Cocktails were passed and hors d'oeuvres were served. Throughout the receiving hours music was furnished by a 5-piece orchestra. Assisting the Ambassador in greeting guests were the Naval Attache and Senora de Merlo Flores, the Military Attache and Senora de Gomez, and the Minister and Senora da Luduena.

Those in the gathering included Col. and Mrs. Anthony Biddle, Mr. and Mrs. Julian Ortiz, Raymond Muir, assistant chief of protocol; Don Tomas J. de Anchorena, Miss Elma Baker, and Enrique Ramirez.

Cocktail Party Fetes Anniversary

TO celebrate their second anniversary, the Minister Counselor of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Vega gave a cocktail party at their home yesterday from 6 to 8 o'clock. Ranking guests were the Ambassador of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Thomen.

Among others were former Washingtonians, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Newman, who are here on a visit from Ciudad Trujillo. Also the Ambassador of the Dominican Republic to the OAS and Senora de Rodriguez, the Minister Counselor of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Cohn, Mr. and Mrs. Willard Barber, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dudley, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Price, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Wheelock, Dr. and Mrs. Fernando Sacasa, and many more.

Senora de Herbruger, wife of the Ambassador of Panama, was the guest in whose honor Mrs. Clarence Grosner entertained on Friday at a luncheon in her apartment at the Shoreham Hotel. Guests attending numbered 28.

In her acceptance speech, Mrs. Hughes promised to serve in the federation's effort to promote "partnership of women with men and becoming a greater force in directing human events, particularly in steps toward peace."

Mrs. Hughes, who was graduated from college in Baltimore and received a law degree from George Washington University, was admitted to the District of Columbia bar and the Texas bar in 1922. In 1937 she was admitted to the Supreme Court of the United States. She has been elected four times to a Texas judgeship.

Two Versions of Crab Ravigote Offered for Epicures to Decide Which Takes the Culinary Honors

READERS' recipes for Crab Ravigote have had us watering at the mouth since returning from vacation a few days ago.

They were sent in response to a question from G. L. about how to make ravigote (defined by a French dictionary as "shallot sauce,") and they all sound wonderful. We wish there were space to pass along the entire lot. Lacking this, we've picked out a couple—one made with white sauce and one made with mayonnaise.

CRAB RAVIGOTE

1 cup flaked crab meat (or 1 6½-ounce can)
1 cup thick white sauce
1 egg
1 tablespoon chopped capers
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon paprika
1 tablespoon minced parsley
1 pimento, chopped
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 green pepper, chopped

Stir crab meat into white sauce. Add seasonings, beaten egg yolk. Fold in beaten white. Pour into buttered baking dish. Cover with bread crumbs. Dust with paprika. Bake 30 minutes in moderate oven.

Mrs. G. M. Saharov, Washington.

The one made with mayonnaise was sent in by Mrs. N. G. Eakle, but she credits it to the May, 1950, issue of recipes and menus published by Potomac Electric Power Co.

CRAB RAVIGOTE

1 pound lump crab meat
1½ cups mayonnaise
½ teaspoon dry mustard
1 tablespoon finely minced tarragon
1 tablespoon finely minced chervil
1 tablespoon finely minced chives
Capers and pimentos
6 clean crab shells
1 tablespoon finely minced parsley

Add herbs and mustard to mayonnaise and combine with crab lump, being careful not to break lump. Reserve some of the sauce to cover crabs. Pack into shells. Cover with ravigote sauce and garnish with capers and strips of pimentoes. Sprinkle with parsley.

Still catching up on the mail, here's a suggestion for B. K. who wanted to know how to hang shelves on a plaster wall.

DEAR ANNE:
Re: B. K.'s request, I would suggest she try the self-attaching hooks that are sold along with a capsule of a glue that, once applied, is practically impossible to loosen. I don't know of a local place that sells these. However, she can get more information about them, as well as order them, by writing TON 601, Rochelle Park, N. J. They work perfectly on plaster walls, much better than trying to use nails or screws. With the properly designed shelf, there is nothing better.
J. H. McE., Arlington, Va.

DEAR ANNE:
Is it really necessary to scald vegetables before freezing? All the instructions say to do so, but wouldn't the fresh taste be better preserved without this step? Seems to me the freezing would be enough of a preservative without this cooking. W. G., Leesburg, Va.

Yes, W. G., that scalding is necessary. And, actually, it's vital in preserving the wonderful garden-fresh flavor of your vegetables.

Scalding destroys the enzymes that bring about aging and it sets the appetizing natural color of the vegetables, too. After the scalding, they should be quickly cooled to stop the cooking at exactly the right point.

DEAR ANNE:
For my quiet wedding at the church at which only the family and a few close friends will attend, I had planned on walking down the aisle alone and meeting the groom-to-be at the altar. I had not planned on having a maid-of-honor, best man or any attendants. I have been told that this would be against all rules of etiquette. Since I would prefer it to be the way I planned, would you advise me if this would be permissible.
M. L. K., Hamrick, Md.

There's no rule of etiquette that says you must have bridal attendants. True, it's usually done, but you won't be violating any of Mrs Grundy's edicts if you don't. After all, it's your wedding and will be your memory to cherish. Have it as you want it!

DEAR ANNE:
Here's a tip for Mrs. H.E.M.: Onions will keep perfectly at room temperature if, instead of being sliced, the outer layers, as needed, are carefully slipped off. One medium layer makes about 1 tablespoon chopped, with the average -sized onion. Mrs. D. H. Barker,
Silver Spring, Md.

Pope Elevates 'Lily of Quito' To Sainthood Before 45,000

Vatican City, July 9 (U.P.).—More than 45,000 saw the blessed Anna Maria de Gesu de Paredes, the "Lily of Quito," Ecuador, raised to sainthood today in St. Peter's Basilica.

Pope Pius XII described her as an example to young people besieged by "so many insidious dangers."

The colorful ceremony was the last of the 1950 Holy Year, although there will be several beatifications later. The new saint was the only native of the new world to be raised to the "honors of the altar" during the jubilee, but was the third native-born saint of the American continent.

Pilgrims, ecclesiastic authorities, and special government officials represented Chile, Spain, Bolivia, Cuba, Colombia and Ecuador at the ceremony.

Ten cardinals, six Ecuadorian bishops and 60 other bishops were in the basilica as was the patriarch of the Coptic Catholics, Maximo II. Smaller groups of pilgrims from France, England, Indo-China, Egypt, Belgium, Ireland, India, the United States and French North Africa added to the international audience.

The new saint devoted the 26 years of her life to religious acts. She died in 1645, two days after praying that her life be taken and that the plague-ridden population of Quito be spared. The plague ended with her death.

Uncle of Bao Dai Seeks to End His Exile of 44 Years

Hongkong, July 9 (U.P.).—Prince Cuong De, 81-year-old uncle of Viet Nam ruler Bao Dai and mystery man of Far Eastern politics for decades, arrived here Saturday and said he was trying to return to Indo-China after 44 years of self-imposed exile.

The almost legendary figure, who helped China's Sun Yat Sen and Soviet agent Michael Borodin "consolidate" the Chinese Revolution 25 years ago, said he wanted to form a "third force" in Indo-China opposed both to French colonial officials and Communist rebels.

British officials refused to let him land when the Norwegian ship Haiming put in from Japan. They claimed his passport was forged.

Cuang De also was refused entry at Bangkok last week when, his spokesman said, French representatives asked him to seek French "protection." French authorities denied they were interested in Cuang De, whose nephew they support.

Bandleader Tangles With Sleeping Pills

Hollywood, July 9 (U.P.).—Bandleader Charlie Barnet told police today he took a number of sleeping tablets in an effort to effect a reconciliation with his wife, film actress Rita Merrett.

Police said he refused medical aid, claiming he took 21 pills "to scare by wife," but kept them inside his mouth and spit them out in the garden of her Sherman Oaks home. She said he threatened to shoot himself when the reconciliation attempt failed, then took the pills.

GOP Planning New Attack on Asia Policy

By The Associated Press

Republican Chairman Guy George Gabrielson indicated yesterday that the Administration's Far Eastern record will get a drubbing at a regional party conference in Salt Lake City July 31 and August 1.

"Republican leaders for years have been urging a firmer policy there," Gabrielson said in a statement announcing the tentative program for the meeting.

"The record shows that many of them urged a long time ago the specific action taken by the Democrat Administration after the advance from North Korea." He did not elaborate.

The GOP National Executive Committee and party leaders from 11 Western States will come together in the second of three regional meetings. The first was at Atlantic City, N. J., last month, and the third will be held in Chicago September 15-16.

"The Korean and Formosa situation unodubtedly will figure in the discussions" at Salt Lake, Gabrielson said. "The Far Eastern situation developed after our Atlantic City meeting."

States and Territories participating include Alaska, Arizona, California, Colorado, Hawaii, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, Utah, Washington and Wyoming.

Walloons Plan 'Stop Leopold' General Strike

Brussels, July 9 (U.P.).—A 24-hour "Stop Leopold" general strike protesting the return of the exiled Belgian King will be held throughout French-speaking Walloonia Wednesday, the Socialist-controlled Belgian Federation of Labor announced tonight.

Simultaneously, meetings denouncing King Leopold will be held in all major towns of Walloonian South Belgium, where feeling is high against the monarch.

Parliament, in which the pro-Leopold Catholics hold a small but effective majority, will reconvene inl joint session Tuesday to call the King back by repealing the 1945 law which ruled him "unfit to resign" because of his alleged sympathy for the Nazis.

29th Division Battles Mud At Pickett

Camp Pickett, Va., July 9 (AP).—Familiar old "General Mud" appeared on the scene to assist in the field training of the Twenty-Ninth Infantry Division here today.

A soaking rain during the National Guard outfit's first full day in the field made the training grounds muddy and slippery. The recruits, here for a 15-day summer training session, didn't like it, but the officers took advantage of the adverse weather to teach their men some valuable lessons.

The motorized weapons, the vehicles and the personnel are as mud proof as experience and military science can make them. There are double wheels and caterpillar treads, extra-powered gears, and winches that can pull heavy guns out of almost any difficulty.

Concentration of the division here was completed before nightfall yesterday. Today's program included religious services and extensive preparations for the start of field work with weapons at 6 a. m. Tuesday.

The 115th Infantry Regiment, made up of western Maryland troops under Col. Randolph Millholland, of Cumberland, will make all the noise Tuesday. Its schedule includes the firing of all the regimental weapons including the heavy mortars, heavy tank guns, light mortars, 50 and 30-caliber machine guns, rifles, carbines, and pistols.

Senate Leaders Now Predict Confirmation of Pike for AEC

Administration Democrats changed their tune yesterday and predicted the Senate will confirm renomination of Sumner T. Pike to the Atomic Energy Commission.

Under a unanimous consent agreement, the issue goes to a Senate vote at 4 p. m. today. Democrats, after hasty surveys, predicted he will be confirmed "with votes to spare."

The predictions were tempered only by one qualification. It was that Pike's opponents could pick up votes if they would cite specific cases to back up their charge he is "unqualified" for the job.

The predictions contrasted sharply with the attitude taken by the same Democrats more than a week ago when Senate members of the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee rejected Pike by a 5-to-4 vote. They said then it would be an uphill battle.

Pike, a Maine Republican, was one of he original members of the AEC. His first term expired at the end of June and President Truman nominated him for four additional years.

Despite his GOP affiliations, Pike is unpopular with Republican members of the Congressional Atomic Energy Committee. All four voted against his renomination and they were joined by Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.).

Administration leaders feared originally that announcement of the committee vote would put an end to any hope for confirmation. But Pike received the immediate backing of Maine's Republican Senators, Margaret Chase Smith and Owen Brewster.

Great Godfrey Started Climb at $10-a-week Job

(Second of a Series)

By Jack O'Brian

When Arthur Godfrey was a lad the Duke of Windsor was the Prince of Wales and was spending more time in falling off horses than today he spends at parties.

To the carrot-topped Godfrey boy, the handsome young Prince of Wales was just a picture in the newspapers of a man being detached violently from a thoroughbred and certainly far beyond the world the little redhead envisioned some day would be his own.

At the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel a few weeks ago during a luncheon of The Banshees, an organization of famous newspapermen where both were guests, Godfrey suddenly found himself being introduced to the unhorsed former King of England who once was that glamorous picture in the papers, too impossibly distant socially ever to imagine meeting on equal terms.

The Duke and Godfrey conversed easily about television, and the former King mentioned to King Arthur of the Air Waves that he was quite the enthusiastic TV fan.

"I hope you're looking when I'm on," said the Duke of the Uke to the Duke of Windsor, who quickly countered in the friendliest possible fashion:

"Is there a time when you're not?"

Pied Piper Supreme

This was, of course, just another slight milestone in the rapidly expanding celebrity of Arthur Godfrey, whose 40 million followers each week do his bidding in a fashion that makes a sad and tepid flutist indeed of his ancient counterpart, the Pied Piper of Hamelin.

Such glittering acquaintances as the erstwhile British ruler could not have been further from his family's thoughts when little Arthur Godfrey arrived exactly 47 years ago next August 31 in the comfortable but modest Godfrey home on 112th st. just off Amsterdam ave.

Because he and his family—his father, mother and a brother—moved to Hasbrouck Heights, N. J., when Arthur was very young, he doesn't remember the exact location of the house itself.

From the manner in which his followers have reacted in other instances, it may be just as well for the owners of the property. There is more than a slight suspicion that a good percentage of his fans would descend upon the house, erect a plaque or even a statue to their hero, and declare it unfit for ordinary occupancy thenceforth.

Over in Hasbrouck Heights some of his old neighbors remember Arthur as a typical boy, full of fun, more than his share of good natured mischief, a deep interest in the fortunes of the Brooklyn Dodgers, a pretty fair left hook in street corner altercations, a face that seemed always set in a full grin, all topped by a shock of red hair that now seems one of the best reasons for hustling color television into operation.

A mixture of Irish, Scotch and English, Godfrey's parents were of intelligent stock.

His father was a magazine writer, editor, former newspaperman, a specialist in equine articles and a particular expert on the hackney horse.

Ran Away at 14

His mother was a pianist and amateur painter.

But when Arthur was 10, the family lost its money. Things were so rough in the eyes of the suddenly sobered lad that, from being the life-of-the-neighborhood, he took on the mantle of adulthood in one stroke. While little Arthur never could entirely erase his good humor, the continued reduced family circumstances depressed him until he was 14, when he took the traditional American Boy expedient—he ran away.

He hoped that would be one less burden on his folks, although his staying home, his mother says now, would have made the rough years easier to bear—Arthur possessing that sort of comfortable manner even then.

But off he trudged, his few belongings packed into one small bag as he boarded the ferry across the Hudson for the city he some day was to entertain more completely than any person in the history of entertainment.

Not entirely with a light heart, the little boy went job hunting. His first success—a $10-a-week position as office boy in an architect's office.

Happily, he went through that first week's work, awaiting the fortune that was to come on Saturday. When it arrived, he put the money safely in his pocket, and next day after church set off for a Sunday of sightseeing. The Statue of Liberty being first on his program.

Learned of Women

The young, lonesome lad was walking up the stairs of the Statue when a strange girl, several years older and, as it turned out, a woman of the world using Bedloe's Island for a pickpocketing base, struck up a conversation.

Arthur, grateful for anyone to talk to, spent on hour in sprightly conversation. Then the girl said she had to go to the powder room but would be back directly.

Nine boats to Manhattan came and went while Arthur, gullible as any youngster his age, waited. Finally he went to a hamburger stand and ordered 65 cents worth of food.

When it was time to pay, he discovered his $10 had disappeared with his first pickup, a situation that was pretty tragic back in 1917 but today strikes him, as most things do, on the funnybone:

"I figure I am the only man now alive who was rolled in the Statue of Liberty," he laughed in his familiar baritone style.

The tragedy of the incident was that Arthur had to wash dishes to pay for his meal, then got hungry from exertion, ate some more, which in turn he had to pay for by washing more dishes, which made him hungrier still, which might have gone on forever.

It managed to keep him from returning to his brief architectural career. At night he slept between rolls of newsprint in the old New York Tribune, and worked at add jobs where he could find them. This casual but trying existence ended after a year when he answered an ad for civilian workers at an Army separation center in New Jersey.

He was hired, although he wasn't a typist or a high school graduate, the two prerequisites for the job, at the most monumental salary he'd ever dreamed about until then—$105 a month, plus barracks privileges.

While helping separate World War I veterans from their khaki, Arthur became fast friends with a soldier headed home for his beloved Clymer, Pa., a community which took on increased attractions during his overseas service. So glowingly did he detail its municipal advantages, the pulchritude of its young ladies, the romance of its coal mining, that off Arthur went with his new friend to the mines.

Being slight of build and without the tender ministrations of home food and proper care, Arthur worked underground only a short time until he developed a cough. He was advised by a company doctor to get a job outside the mines and for a while he worked on coal cars as they came out of the pits.

Lightweight Paul Bunyan

Despite his skimpy physical resources at the time, Godfrey was so moved by stories of forest rangers and the men who cut down the trees that he tried to become a lumberjack. As he then weighed a soaking 140 pounds, he was not exactly a threat to Paul Bunyan.

"I couldn't even lift the ax they use," he laughed and added: "It was an awful mistake."

Quickly the Godfrey future switched from lumberjacking to farming, the first available job, where he saved his money and moved along to Akron, Ohio.

By now—he was 16—a man of the world, Godfrey knew what to do in such emergencies. He walked into an Akron police station, and with his Irish antecedents having accounted for a Gaelic physiognomy, he hauled off and hit the police sergeant on duty with as rich an Irish brogue as the uniformed gentleman had heard since leaving County Cork.

The little fiction worked and the sergeant listened with great sympathy to the tale of the young Irish lad who wanted a job and a place to live. The latter was easier, and the sergeant made room for Godfrey in a neat cell, then pulled a few bluecoated strings to get him a job in a rubber company plant.

Arthur might still have been in Akron, running the Goodyear Rubber Co. by now if it hadn't been for a railroad strike. The rubber plant had to shut down and Godfrey found his dishwashing facility again a handy emergency occupation.

Dice Game "Stickman"

At night he picked up a few more dollars working in a dice game, eventually advancing to the security of "stickman." But having moved from the police cell to the home of a young college man named Daniel Cullinane, who looked on his dice activities with disfavor, Arthur one day found himself the object of a serious meeting with his educated friend and a Catholic priest. Their solution:

Join the Navy, see the world, and forget about becoming a professional gambler.

Arthur took their advice and never once regretted it.

He traveled the world, changed his gambling status from professional to amateur as was Navy tradition on paydays, and studied so hard he was able to pass the entrance examinations for Annapolis.

But having been too young to get into the first World War, Godfrey discovered a little action might possibly come his way if he were to volunteer for service in the Mediteranean during the Greco-Turkish war.

"I wasn't the admiral type anyway," he says now.

He was a radio operator on a destroyer patrolling the Mediterranean, and a good one, his superiors attest. When he encountered no action in that area of operations that did not stem from the barroom forays of his shipmates, he decided that for then at least he'd had it.

The Navy was followed by a dervish assortment of jobs. He wrote advertising for a perfume company but left accusing the boss of not smelling quite so well as his product.

He watched the Fords go by him on a Detroit assembly line. Fortunes seemed bent on returning him to the kitchen and he became a dishwasher in the Book-Cadillac Hotel in Detroit, but swiftly worked up to short order cook.

He shifted to night clerk of a questionable clientele and left hurriedly when he discovered it was headquarters for a widely known mob of hoodlums.

In those days his favorite reading was the want ads. Answering an ad for a salesman's job one day, he discovered he was on the selling end of an unusual commodity indeed—cemetery lots. That was the first hint that the Godfrey persuasiveness might be his fortune.

Fling at Vaudeville

In a month he was earning $500 a week, was living in a suite at the same hotel where once he served short orders, and put a down payment on a Stutz-Bearcat, ultimate sign of complete affluence of the day.

But his mother's musical leanings were more deeply imbedded than he ever thought and one day a fellow to whom Arthur was trying to sell a final hole in the ground, countered by offering Godfrey a half interest in his vaudeville act, which included the right to perform.

Unable to resist the call of the four-a-day siren of vaudeville, Godfrey instantly proclaimed his cemetery salesmanship a dead issue, trouped through the West to California—and wound up broke!

Riding freight trains to Chicago, where he intended to start over, Arthur tried to become a cab driver armed only with willingness and a map of the city but was fired when his recommendations failed to stand up.

"Furthermore, the address you gave is a half mile out in Lake Michigan," the manager announced, adding the dreaded: "You're fired."

No security loomed anywhere. Taking stock, Arthur decided the only period of economic safety in his life until then was in the Nation's Service, and off he sped to the first recruiting office he could find.

It was the Coast Guard. The sudden decision to join changed his whole future. It placed him in Baltimore the night his first opportunity to go into radio presented itself.

He might have fallen into radio had he remained selling cemetery lots, or dishwashing, but he doubts it.

"The services are good jobs in themselves," he said last week, "and anyway, I think every time I worked for Uncle Sam I was lucky."

TOMORROW: A dare sent Arthur Godfrey into radio. Talent kept him there.

THAT MAN GODFREY—Here's Arthur Godfrey, Duke of the Uke, in all his happy-go-lucky glory. His strumming, his laughter, his banter on the radio have captured the heart of America

SEEING THE WORLD—When Arthur got a job as "stickman" in a dice game, a priest persuaded him to join the Navy and forget about professional gambling. So here he sits beside the Parthenon in Athens with his trusty banjo

CORSAGE FOR TEACHER—Arthur made a personal appearance in Hartford, Conn., last year, and who should drop in but his teacher, Mary B. Owigg. She taught him at Hasbrouck Heights. And thinks (now) he was one of her star pupils

WHEN HE WAS TWO—Arthur says he didn't feel comfortable, dressed that way, but his mother was keeping him in the style for boys of that age

L'Enfant Plan Of Washington Now Available

A six-color reproduction of the original plan of Washington by Maj. Pierre L'Enfant is available to the public in connection with the city's 150th anniversary.

An exact tracing of the faded document was made by the Coast and Geodetic Survey in 1887. A few copies were made, but the original edition has been out of print many years.

The plan established the width of streets and provided for avenues "to connect by direct communication the separate and most distant objects."

The reprints, measuring 30 by 47 inches, and costing 50 cents each, are available at the office of Rear Admiral R. F. A. Studds, director, Coast and Geodetic Survey, Department of Commerce, 14th st. and Constitution ave. nw.

NBC's Hawkins Falls A Simple Saga

By John Crosby

As one of the less pessibnate admirers of small-town radio dramas, I find myself agreeably surprised by NBC television's new show, "Hawkins Falls (pop. 6200)" (WNBW, 8 p. m., Saturdays). This saga of a little Midwest community is a very simple, very honest and very endearing show indeed.

Radio always has some curious ideas about small towns, peopling them with Great Gildersleeves, querulous druggists and other cantankerous but good-hearted folk, all stylized.

In radio, it was accepted as gospel that small-town people were not only essentially virtuous, but also deeply and indestructibly naive, a very debatable proposition. Some of the intrigues that went on in my own home town of Oconomowoc, Wis. (pop. 5000) would have made Machiavelli's blood run cold.

"Hawkins Falls," which emanates from Chicago, has succeeded in capturing the small town, with, I should say, the irreducible minimum of malarkey. Each of these stories shows how a single small event—a wedding let's say—stirs and envelopes the whole community.

The particular wedding, which occupied last Saturday's program, was a union between a local girl and out-of-town boy.

Chips on His Shoulder

THE lad arrives in town with a chip on his shoulder. He feels, unwarrantably, that the community is hostile toward him, simply because he is from out-of-town, and he'll be gosh-darned if he'll be the cynosure of a whole townful of unfriendly eyes at a big, full-dress church wedding. He wants to elope.

The thwarting of this elopement, since the couple is going to get married in any case, sounds like a very slender dramatic pretext on which to string a full hour program. Yet, it becomes terribly important to the listener that this couple be married properly in church, rather than to dash off skittishly to the local Elkton.

In the meantime, you are given a glimpse of every detail of a small-town wedding. The three-piece orchestra, headed by the local barber, which is to play at the wedding. The gossip of the two ladies who run the shop which is to provide the flowers. "He practically admitted to me that his own wife, Pearl, is all thumbs when it comes to arranging flowers." That's about as scandalous as the gossip ever gets in Hawkins Falls.

There is one deft and amusing scene where the parents of the bride open wedding presents and discover their oil-rich relative has sent the cheapest present and that an old flame of papa's has sent the most expensive one. There is a tender scene between grandpa and a 14-year-old lad who has always had a crush on the bride and is hurt and bewildered by her plunge into matrimony with someone else.

Intervals of Song

THERE are even intervals of songs spotted throughout—the choir soprano rehearsing "One Kiss," the bride bursting into "What Are Little Girls Made Of," and the soda jerk at the drug store, virtually the only man in town who can't get to the wedding because he has to mind the store, singing "My Foolish Heart" to the accompaniment of a music box.

The characters are all distinct and salty individuals without ever falling into caricature, as do their radio counterparts, all, that is, except the principals, the bride and groom, who seem curiously lifeless next to the minor characters. As you probably perceive, the authors have borrowed liberally from a number of sources. There are traces of "Our Town," of "Father of the Bride," and possibly even of "The Member of the Wedding" in this particular production. I see nothing wrong in this. They are all good sources.

In the end, the wedding takes place as planned, and the story ends with that overwhelmingly dramatic and photogenic spectacle—the ceremony itself. Implicit, though never mentioned, in this slight tale, is the message that a marriage, to be decently launched, should be blessed not only by God, but by the community at large. A very nice message it is, too.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Policeman Has Formula For Getting Rich

At first glance, it appeared to have the makings of a story. A police private had bought a new house, and was being investigated by his suspicious superiors.

"How could you afford that kind of house on your salary?" they asked.

"Nothing to it," smiled the cop. "I save my money, and don't drink, smoke or run around. Besides, my father died two years ago, and they've just settled his estate."

Department officials confirmed the story of the inheritance, and all hands enjoyed a good laugh.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Two female tiger kittens, beautifully marked; they've caught mice." (Shepherd 8588 after 6 p. m.)

Fluffy half-Persian 7-week-old kittens want home in suburbs." (Woodley 6446.)

"Mother cat and three gray kittens; we're leaving for Germany." (Otis 9299).

"Four beautiful kittens, 6 weeks old." (North 0385).

"Male terrier, 9 months old, used to children." (Wisconsin 1343.)

"Beautifully marked 1-year-old part fox terrier, will deliver. We're moving." (Glebe 0576 after 6 p. m.)

"Beautiful, housebroken part-Persian cat, 18 months old." (Shepherd 2441 after 6 p. m.)

"WHATEVER GOES UP . . ."

For the first time since I bought my present car, I had occasion to crack out the tools that came with it, to change a tire.

But when it came time to let the car down off the jack, I found myself in trouble.

Like the cost of living, the jack seemed to be designed for movement in one direction only—up. I had to Call Carl to get me straightened out.

"Carl" turned out to be an efficient young man who solved my problem in a jiffy. In case you ever get stuck in a similar predicament, here's the explanation:

My jack had never been used since it was manufactured some time prior to 1947. It was new, stiff, and dry.

A good shot of light oil permitted the "reverse" mechanism to work properly, and my jalopy was back on the street.

CLUB NEWS.

The usual tenth of the month meeting of the District Line Club will be replaced with a Wienie Roast tonight. District Liners are invited to gather at 8:15 p. m. at the 16th st. entrance of Walter Reed, from which point transportation will be provided to Grove No. 11, Rock Creek Park. Bring your own wieners, friends and refreshments.

PLEASE, PLEASE, PLEASE

I hate to waste the space to voice this plea again, but I guess I'll have to.

All Give-Away letters must include the donor's name and address. I cannot use items which do not list a phone number. Please write out the telephone exchange; the "GI" of an abbreviated "Glebe" looks exactly like the "Ge" of an abbreviated "Georgia." Mail your letter at least three days before you hope to see it in print. And please don't ask me to get things for you. These are Give-Aways, not "want" ads.

PERSONAL NOTES

Ben Hastings, Cottage City, Md.: I know. I've been trying to get 'em to make the crossword puzzle easier, but they just sneer at me and say "Those of us who went past the 5th grade don't have any trouble with it." I work on it for 20 minutes, fill in about a half-dozen words, and give up.

Eleanor Tatge, 5811 14th st. nw.: That "Pat Your Hairdresser" sign has probably been sent in by more District Liners than any other. It outranks the Zoo's "Lost Children Will Be Taken To The Lion House" and also the Philip Marlowe jokes about the "Private Eye Hospital" sign.

HE'S KIDDING, I HOPE

David Kandel of 1311 H st. nw. assures me that in the files of the Veterans Administration, there's a letter from a woman who wrote:

"I just can't pay any more premiums on my husband's life insurance. I haven't been working regularly, and have had trouble making ends meet, ever since my husband died two years ago."

SECRET WEAPON

Another letter from Pete Dickerson in New York informs me that he's trying to track down a hot rumor that, between wars, our military establishment has had time to develop a new Super-Spam.

"DO I HAFTA, MOM?"

Hold World Faith Links, Cleric Urges

Toronto, July 9 (AP).—The World Council of Churches must use "all possible opportunities" to keep in touch with Christians in Soviet-dominated nations, a council spokesman said today.

Dr. W. A. Visser't Hooft of Geneva, Switzerland, general secretary of the World Council, said there is danger that Christians behind the Iron Curtain will be forgotten "precisely at the moment when they are in the midst of their great spiritual battles."

Dr. Visser't Hooft's report was prepared for the 90-member central committee of the World Council, which includes 160 million church members in 44 countries of all major Christian confessions except Roman Catholicism.

In the central committee is vested authority for the council's actions between meetings of the council assembly every five years.

Dr. Visser't Hooft urged that Christian prayers include church leaders in China and eastern Europe "who remain wholly loyal to the Christian cause and fight against atheism in its various forms."

He added that these leaders "are often misunderstood because their social and political decisions differ from those which are taken by the majority of Christians in the west."

But he emphasized that the World Council disapproved of church leaders "who create spiritual and moral confusion by trying to mix their Christianity with secular or even anti-Christian or totalitarian ideologies."

The general secretary said it was "a downright lie" that there were any Communists on the central committee of the World Council. He did not amplify the remark.

Earlier today Dr. Franklin Clark Fry of New York, president of the United Lutheran Church in America and vice chairman of the central committee, said that much of modern preaching "is morbidly obsessed with man."

Christians need to take "a searching, hungering, yearning look at God" as an antidote to "groundless optimism" and "darkest forebodings," he said.

Menzies Takes Plane For London and D. C.

Sydney, Australia, July 9 (AP).—Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies left by air tonight on a four-week trip to London, Washington and Canada.

Menzies said he would discuss "certain financial problems" in Washington, though he did not say he would try to negotiate a dollar loan.

Korea Intelligence Error Cited

By Drew Pearson

A general who brandishes a stick and talks in a crisp British accent is catching brickbats at the Pentagon for whopping intelligence errors on Korea.

Willoughby

He is Maj. Gen. Charles A. Willoughby, 58, German-born chief of MacArthur's intelligence who has been with him since Manila days. Willoughby copies his boss in both stance and garb, even to the scarf inside the open-throated shirt.

A few weeks before the Korean attack, General Willoughby dismissed Korea as "not important" in talks with visiting firemen from Washington.

"You must keep your eye on the Reds and know what they will do next," Willoughby pontificated. "You can take it from me, Iran is the place to watch. An attack very soon, old boy."

This was essentially the briefing given Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson and Gen. Omar Bradley in Tokyo. In fact, General Bradley, returning to Washington, was most cautious about committing aid to Korea because of Willoughby's advice.

Two errors of judgment laid at General Willoughby's door are:

1. The National Security Council decision that Korea's threat was to its "internal security." This was made despite a report from General Willoughby's own staff that there were some 70 tanks in North Korea. Tanks are strictly an offensive weapon, and now the key to the Communist successes. Yet Willoughby attached no significance to the presence of these tanks.

2. Overrating the South Korean army. In his first teletype conversations with the Pentagon after the invasion, General MacArthur confidently expected the southerners to take a firm stand. Actually, the southern army fell apart in virtually a complete rout. This has dangerously imperiled United Nations supply lines and ports.

Note—To one delegation from Washington, General Willoughby lectured on the importance of prestige in the Orient. "It's the way you live, you know, that counts," he declaimed.

Capturing the South

For years Republicans have been hoping to capture or even make a dent in the solid Democratic South—without success. Now it looks as if they could do it.

Jonathan Daniels, who used to be one of the Roosevelt-Truman secretaries, had a heart-to-heart talk with his old boss in the White House the other day and told him how.

Daniels, who has been one of Truman's most loyal supporters, warned that the Administration's continued blind support for the FEPC (Fair Employment Practices Commission) was ruining the Democratic Party in the South, and would even defeat the best parts of the Truman program in the North.

Daniels, who comes from North Carolina and is the son of Woodrow Wilson's liberal Secretary of the Navy, gave Truman a case history showing how Senator Frank Graham, former president of the University of North Carolina and one of the outstanding liberals in the South, had been defeated for the Senate only because of the Negro-FEPC question. He also cited the Senate primary in South Carolina where the two candidates, Gov. Strom Thurmond, Dixiecrat, and Senator Olin Johnston, both are trying to outdo each other in castigating the Negro.

Smart GOP Tactics

It is doubtful if Jonathan Daniels' talk with the President made too much of an impression. Daniels had talked to him before—in Chicago last May and again last fall—without result.

It is also significant that certain Republican leaders, such as Senator Brewster of Maine, who votes for FEPC, have been using FEPC to undermine the Democratic Party in the South. It is likewise significant that Guy Gabrielson, chairman of the Republican National Committee, made an unadvertised trip to South Carolina the other day where Republicans are secretly backing Governor Strom Thurmond, former Dixiecrat candidate for President.

Meanwhile, here is the inside story of the "Battle of North Carolina," which shows how the GOP has now learned to invade the South in sheep's clothing.

Up until June 5, 1950, Willis Smith, Senator Graham's opponent for the Senate, having trailed in the first primary, had not asked for a runoff. He was 50,000 votes behind Graham, and it looked as if he could not overcome his lead.

But on June 5 the Supreme Court handed down one of its historic decisions, opposing segregation in the University of Texas. This was announced in the North Carolina newspapers on June 6 and one day later Willis Smith seized this as a heaven-sent opportunity to defeat Frank Graham.

Graham had previously held a State-wide examination for candidates to West Point, announcing that he would appoint the man with the highest grade, and a Negro came out as third alternate. This was one of Smith's best weapons.

Helping him spread the anti-Negro propaganda were large amounts of Republican money, some of it raised by Senator Brewster, chairman of the Senate Republican Re-election Committee. Among other things Brewster inserted in the Congressional Record a Reader's Digest version of a book by isolationist, pro-Fascist John T. Flynn, castigating Graham. Brewster's insert exceeded the allotted space, so part was paid for by someone other than the taxpayers. At any rate a million reprints were made and mailed from a box number in Grand Central Station in New York to boxholders in North Carolina.
